New Deal and Business Draft Program To Insure Lasting Recovery to Nation

Overhauling of Labor Policies, Tax Revision, New Deal for Railroads and Utilities Form Base

PRIVATE SPENDING IS HOPKINS' GOAL

Vast Expansion Expected To Provide 'Drive' Sought by Washington.

By HENRY PAYNTER.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—

Tax revision, a new deal for railroads and utilities, and an overhauling of labor policies are basic elements of a joint business-administration program designed to bring lasting recovery, some industrial leaders said today.

Secretary of Commerce Harry L. Hopkins, under whose supervision the plan has been elaborated in secret conferences with big business leaders during the past two months, is expected to pronounce the benediction of the New Deal upon the program in a speech at Des Moines, Ia., during the coming week, they said.

Hopkins has represented to some big business leaders, they said, that the "drive" to bring recovery will have the support of President Roosevelt.

Tax Revision Included. The main points of the "drive" as outlined by financial leaders here, are understood to include:

1. Broad revision of the federal tax laws, and basic modification of the Securities and Exchange Commission's policies all in the primary hope of "breaking the logjam of capital resources" and getting the nation's wealth moving, through equity markets, into business expansion. (They pointed out that although President Roosevelt said yesterday that he did not plan to introduce new taxes, that his remarks did not preclude a move originating with business itself through congress.)

2. A long-term program for private electric utility expansion, including an administration promise to limit future competition with private industry, in the hope of immediately launching huge utility spending to "get heavy industry moving."

3. A permanent solution of the railroads' problems in a broad new "transportation act," in which the future of rails, highway traffic, and water transport will be amicably correlated, in the hope of getting "the nation's number one spender on the job."

4. New laws and federal policies relating to coal and other basic mineral industries, worked out jointly by executives, labor and government experts to "eliminate disease spots" in the national economy.

5. A major effort to end factional labor disputes; modification of National Labor Board procedure (but without basic change in the principles of the Wagner act); tempering of the Walsh-Healy act to help solve some small factory problems.

The program in general, they said, was designed not to compromise any of the essential "reform" policies of the "New Deal," but to "consolidate" these changes.

New Reserve President

ROBERT S. PARKER.

PARKER ELECTED BY RESERVE BANK

Unanimously Named to Presidency; Outstanding Work Cited by Neely

Election of Robert S. Parker as president of the Federal Reserve Bank of Atlanta was announced yesterday by Frank H. Neely, chairman of the board of directors.

Parker, who has been first vice president since March 1, 1936, was named to fill the unexpired term of the late Oscar Newton. His election is subject to the approval of the board of governors of the system in Washington.

His term of office runs until March 1, 1941. In announcing Parker's election, shortly after the close of the special meeting of the board, Neely said that his performance as vice president and general counsel of the bank had been so outstanding the board had considered no other candidate for the office. Parker's election was by unanimous acclaim, Neely stated.

"He has been closely associated with the bank through its entire existence, and for the last five years has been vice president and general counsel," said the chairman. "His intimate knowledge of

PLAN TO BEAUTIFY GRADY AREA FOR MEDICAL CENTER

Council To Be Asked To Close Sections of Streets To Construct System of Parks at Hospital.

SCENIC DRIVEWAY INCLUDED IN PLAN

Vision of T. K. Glenn Nearing Reality in First Step of Broad Program

By LUKE GREENE.

Development of a great medical center around Grady hospital with beautiful parks, flower gardens and scenic drives will begin as soon as plans are completed for closing sections of Butler and Armstrong streets, T. K. Glenn, Atlanta banker and chairman of the Grady board of trustees, announced yesterday.

Construction of a system of parks throughout the four-block area bounded by Gilmer street, Piedmont avenue, Coca-Cola place and Pratt street will constitute the first chapter in a story about which Mr. Glenn has long dreamed.

A resolution calling for the closing of Butler street from Gilmer street to Coca-Cola place and Armstrong street from Piedmont avenue to Pratt street will be introduced in city council tomorrow afternoon, Mr. Glenn said. Each of these areas would be converted into a park. The plan already has been tentatively approved by a group of councilmen who attended an informal gathering to discuss the project.

Beautification Project. The proposed medical center has been under discussion for some time, but the beautification project will be the first material step toward its development.

Emory University, the city and the Georgia Power Company now own virtually the entire four blocks which it is hoped eventually will embrace the medical center. Present plans call for the construction of many new build-

RIVERS' LEADERS MODIFY PROGRAM BY 20 PER CENT

Failure of Gross Income and Sales Tax Freely Predicted Because of Bad Split in House.

HARRIS REVEALS SWITCH IN ATTACK

Plan To Slash Budget Then Insist on 100 Per Cent Payment on Rest.

By FRANK DRAKE.

Probability that neither a gross income nor a sales tax will be passed by the general assembly this session was freely predicted yesterday by dozens of members as it became known that the administration fight to finance Governor Rivers' program in full has been modified by a plan to slash appropriations 20 per cent and then push for 100 per cent payment.

Speaker of the House Roy V. Harris, administration stalwart, asserted some $4,000,000 should be cut off the budget but announced that when the amount is set he will "insist on financing the rest in full."

Solons who believe that the gross income and sales taxes will not be adopted declare they base their opinions on the fact the house is split into half a dozen schools of thought and that both the groups favoring "broader basis of taxation" are in the minority.

Constant Clamor. Also, there is a constant clamor for economy and nearly every member who takes the floor pledges to lop thousands of dollars off the expense of government.

On the other hand, however, they are just as vehement in their assertion that the school teachers must be paid, the old folks must get their benefits and the health work must go on.

The house seems decidedly in favor of following out the recommendations of the economy committee which, headed by Wilmer D. Lanier, of Richmond county, colleague of the speaker of the

FANGED RATTLER MAKES HOME COZY FOR SNAKE-MILKER

OCALA, Fla., Feb. 18.—(AP)—

Ross Allen has a new pet—a tame rattlesnake. He said the rattler, five feet long and with a full complement of fangs and poison sacs, is so tame he can pat it on the head like a kitten.

For the benefit of anyone who might be thinking of trying the same stunt, it should be remarked that Allen is the fellow who wrestles alligators barehanded and no holds barred, and makes a business of extracting or "milking" venom from rattlers.

LOYALISTS BOW, OFFER SURRENDER

Authorize France, Britain To Negotiate, Asking for Franco's Mercy.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Spanish government officials said tonight that the Madrid government had authorized France and Great Britain to negotiate its surrender to the Nationalists on the sole condition that there would be no reprisals against former government fighters and sympathizers.

These officials, closely identified with Spanish government President Manuel Azana, said French and British representatives at Burgos had been instructed to present to Generalissimo Franco's government the offer for peace in the two-and-one-half-year-old civil war.

France Seeks Action.

The French government, acting through a special envoy at Burgos, sought quick settlement of the war and repatriation of about 380,000 civilians and soldiers now refugees in France.

Sir Robert M. Hodgson, British agent in Nationalist Spain, arrived at St. Jean de Luz tonight from Burgos, the Nationalist capital, following a reported conference with Nationalist officials on the government's proposition.

Sir Robert talked at length with Nationalist Foreign Minister Count Francisco Gomez Jorda at Burgos before leaving for the French border town to confer with representatives of his government.

Whether he bore Franco's answer was not known but it was understood he conferred immediately with the British foreign office in London by telephone.

Don't Link Efforts.

Officials of the French foreign office said France and Britain had informed the Nationalists that their diplomatic recognition of Franco's government would now be contingent on granting assurances to the Spanish Republican government against reprisals.

The negotiations followed an unsuccessful attempt after the fall of Barcelona to arrange peace in the Spanish conflict.

The difference now seemed to be that France and Britain were backing the Madrid government's sole condition for surrender on their own account.

IL DUCE CALLS OUT 150,000 RESERVES; TROOPS ON MOVE

KEY WEST, Fla., Feb. 18.

(UP)—President Roosevelt, gravely concerned over new complications in the already tense international situation, sped through tropic seas to night to join the American battle fleet in maneuvers.

The chief executive sailed from here aboard the swift cruiser Houston with his plans so arranged that if developments abroad warrant, he can leave the naval maneuvers immediately and return to Washington before March 4 as originally planned.

Before the President embarked, he served notice on the world that institutions of democracy in the western hemisphere "must and shall be maintained." At the same time, he renewed in vigorous terms his intention of carrying forward the "good neighbor" doctrine in this nation's foreign policies.

Aggression Threat.

Last-minute information relayed to Mr. Roosevelt by the State Department in Washington caused the chief executive to take new notice of the foreign situation as he stepped aboard the deck of his flagship anchored off the naval station here.

That information was to the effect that a possibility existed that certain countries would renew their international demands. These demands, it was reported, were being pushed not through regular diplomatic channels, but through a more recent method of relations—the use of fear of aggression.

Mr. Roosevelt, in his conversation with newspapermen, declined to give the names of countries involved in the demands, but observers believed he may have had in mind new gestures toward European democracies by Germany and Italy.

Pan-American Spirit.

The President's reaffirmation of the good neighbor policy came in a brief radio address in connection with the De Soto Exposition at Tampa, Fla.

"The spirit of Pan-Americanism," he said, "is coming more and more to dominate the thoughts and aspirations and the actions of all of the diverse peoples and cultures which comprise the three Americas. It is the certain and unfailing safeguard of our inalienable right to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness."

"Although the peoples of the New World are of many origins, they are united in a common aspiration to defend and maintain the self-governing way of life. That way of life is instinctive in all the peoples of the western hemisphere."

Then he added: "To show our faith in democracy, we have made the policy of the good neighbor the cornerstone of our foreign relations. No other policy would be consistent with our ideas and our ideals. In the fulfillment of this policy we propose to heed the an-

France Strengthens Her African Defenses; German Officers Reported With Italian Garrisons.

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(AP)

Europe's harassed statesmen, agreeing with President Roosevelt tonight that European developments were ominous, foresaw the possibility of a new international crisis at an early date.

While democracies and dictatorships took to the Spanish Nationalist capital at Burgos their fight for European domination—with Britain and France bearing terms of Madrid's surrender—there were these new danger signs:

Italy was said in informed circles in London to have called up 150,000 reservists and to be planning to have another 150,000 with the colors "by the spring." The report lacked confirmation in Rome.

France Alarmed.

France took extraordinary defense precautions in Tunisia and shipped heavy artillery to her key colonial port of Djibouti after re-occupying a strategic Red Sea area ceded to Italy under a 1935 accord which Italy subsequently denounced.

The British government, reliable sources disclosed, was worried by information it had received that German army officers have been attached to Italian garrisons in Libya. It also was said to be aware of important troop movements in Italy and to be seeking to establish how far they were "abnormal."

These developments came as official reports of possible new territorial demands in Europe, backed by threats of aggression, reached President Roosevelt at Key West, Fla. He intimated that because of the reports he might have to cut short his survey of fleet maneuvers and return to Washington before March 4, as he originally planned.

Spain's Terms.

In Paris, Spanish government officials said the Madrid government had authorized Britain and France to negotiate its surrender with only one condition—that there would be no reprisals against

$4 Rail Fare From Coast to Coast

Nation Divided Into Nine Regions Under 'Postal' Transportation Plan.

By PETER NEUMANN.

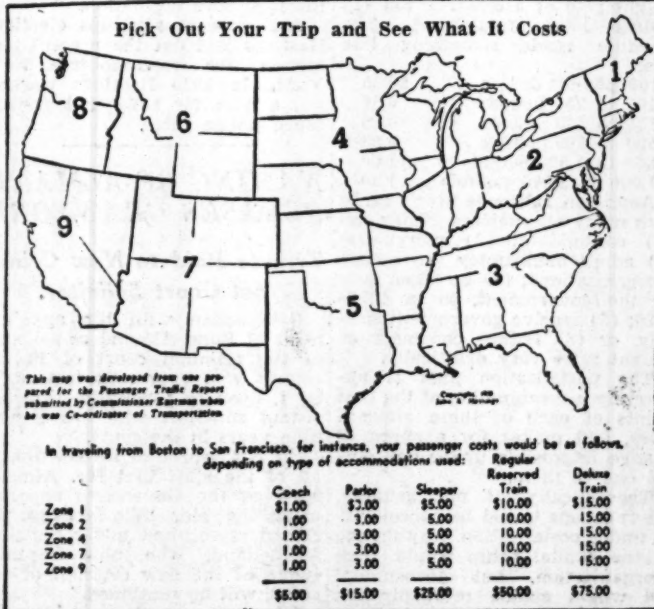

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—"Round trip coach ticket, New York to San Francisco, please," you may soon be saying.

"Regions, two, four, seven, nine," answers the ticket seller, "that'll be $8, sir."

If congress follows the advice just issued by the President's committee on transportation, and passes a bill drastically revising present rate-making schedules, round trip railroad fares such as the above might go down to a tenth of what the one-way fares are now.

No one will plaster a stamp on your forehead, nor will you have to take a running dive down the nearest mail chute. But the benefits will be the same. The nation will be divided into nine zones (see map), and for every zone you enter you will have to pay one of the following charges, depending on the class of travel:

Coach $ 1.00
Parlor Car 3.00
Sleeping Car 5.00
Express Reserved Train 10.00
De Luxe Train 15.00
This does not include your meals

This map shows the nation divided into nine transportation zones, as suggested by the President's committee studying railroad problems. The proposed coach fare in each zone is $1, and $1 is added as you pass from one zone to another, thus providing a coast-to-coast trip for $4. Under this plan it would cost only $1 from Atlanta to Macon, and the same price from Atlanta to Miami, or to any other destination in Region 3.

or berth, but neither do the present high rates. Railroads certainly wouldn't be losing money, for many excursion rates are proportionately low as compared with regular rates, and the roads make money on them, even more than on the regular fares, through increased patronage. It is estimated by the plan's originator, John A. Hastings, that railroad business would jump 500 per cent.

Idea Proposed by President's Committee Being Seriously Considered.

laid off more than 700,000 employees since 1926, and pay rolls between 1920 and 1930 decreased more than a billion dollars. The number of people working on the roads today is nearest the figures as of 1897.

Some surprising arguments have been brought against the postalization plan. They're about the same as those aimed a hundred years ago at Sir Rowland Hill, originator of our present world-wide uniform postage rates.

The main argument is that the railroads would lose their proverbial shirt. An adequate answer to this is that they already have. Another answer is that increased business, especially as applied to a capital structure in the fix of the railroad setup, never hurt anyone.

Not only would receipts rise, but employment and, of course, wages. Millions would be spent on new rolling stock—engines, cars, tracks, badly needed safety devices—booming parts replacement and steel towns, and aiding immeasurably communities along the rights of way.

Another argument shot at pos-

New Southern Area Council Formed by Y.M.C.A. Groups

Lloyd R. Killam Named Executive Secretary With Headquarters Here.

Representatives of the Young Men's Christian Association from 10 southern states in a meeting here yesterday formed a Southern Area Council to co-ordinate the work of local associations, state committees and the national council in this region.

Lloyd R. Killam, of Chicago, was elected secretary of the new group which will establish headquarters in Atlanta.

Decision to form this council was based on the results of a referendum vote which has been conducted in the past four months throughout the south. The committee of 23 canvassed the results and did the preliminary organization work.

It was announced the purpose of the new council will be to provide an effective field service through which southern Y. M. C. A.'s may better meet their common problems by pooling their resources for wider achievement.

In addition to the southerners, those present at today's meeting included John E. Manley, of New York, national secretary of the Y. M. C. A.; Roy E. Sorenson, of Chicago, associate national general secretary. Manley expressed confidence "this new organization will greatly strengthen Y. M. C. A. work in the south."

George Schneider, of New Orleans, was named chairman of a southern area board including representatives of each state. Ralph Hudson, of Knoxville, Tenn., was named recording secretary.

Other members of the board are:

Fred S. Ball, Montgomery, Ala.; Dr. James H. Chapman, Birmingham, Ala.; Will G. Coxhead, St. Petersburg, Fla.; A. L. Reynolds, Miami, Fla.; I. C. Moyer, Columbus, Ga.; Harold F. Brigham, Louisville, Ky.; W. A. Hutton, Covington, Ky.; M. R. Shelton, Shreveport, La.; Robert Gandy, Jackson, Miss.; Edmund Taylor, Greenville, Miss.; F. C. Wilcox, Vicksburg, Miss.; E. D. Cyclorama Visitors Increased by 4,182

Visitors to Atlanta's cyclorama increased by 4,182 from January 11 to February 17, as compared with the same period last year, George I. Simons, city parks manager, announced yesterday.

Since the remodeled cyclorama was reopened this year, 12,065 persons have viewed the famous painting and fought the Battle of Atlanta all over again. Visitors for the same period last year numbered 7,883, Simons said.

ROOSEVELT'S VOICE OPENS EXPOSITION

Customers Pour Into Golden Gate Fair as F. D. R. Broadcasts.

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 18.—(AP) The amplified voices of President Roosevelt and Governor Olson rose above the din of Treasure Island construction work today to formally open the $500,000 Golden Gate Exposition to a constantly swelling flood of visitors.

Ferry boats and automobiles began pouring customers onto the architecturally bejeweled 400-acre man-made island even before an army of all-night workers finished snatching up the more noticeable piles of litter in the gorgeous courts, the picturesque streets and the exhibit palaces.

Speaking from Key West, Fla., the President termed the exposition an "instrument of international good will" and described the San Francisco bay island as "an outstanding example of territorial expansion without aggression."

Governor Olson welcomed the world to the exposition with the hope it would "cement the ties of human brotherhood between the peoples of the different nations which must be relied upon for world peace."

An island-wide address system carried the words of the speakers to the ears of thousands streaming to the scene as well as to a packed grandstand in the Court of Nations, where the ceremonies took place. Works Director W. P. Day said the fair as a whole was about 80 per cent ready for visitors.

Fluker To Hear Death Sentence Again Tomorrow

Odie Fluker, convicted murderer of Eddie Guyot, former Atlanta burglar king, will be resented to death tomorrow by Judge Paul S. Etheridge, of Fulton county superior court.

Fluker among other things objected to dying in the electric chair at Tattall prison, contending he was sentenced to die in the chair when it was at Milledgeville for the killing which occurred in 1936.

Since Fluker's appeals have hung in the courts for several years, the state has moved the execution chair to Tattall prison.

High state courts have ruled that Fluker must die in the state chair and that it makes no difference whether it is at Milledgeville or Tattall.

Atlanta Concerns Plan Home Show

Home-Making in All Phases To Be Covered in Exposition Opening at Auditorium March 13th.

By PRESS HUDDLESTON.

Thirty-five of Atlanta's leading concerns interested in home-building, home-furnishing and decorating, landscaping, and all other essentials to attractive homes, will play a big part in making the "House of Progress Exposition" one of the largest, most beautiful and spectacular of any similar trade exposition ever staged in Atlanta—perhaps in the entire south.

The "House of Progress Exposition" will open at the city auditorium on March 13 and continue for one week. It will be open during the afternoons and evenings.

This, the only home show for Atlanta during the present year, is sponsored by The Constitution, and is under the direction of Foster B. Steward, with years of successful experience in directing trade expositions.

Space Still Open.

About 85 per cent of the nearly 100 spaces set aside for exhibitors have been taken, with yet a few choice spaces left open. Every booth, when the show gets under way, will show in a most attractive way the various and sundry things that go to make up an ideal and modern home. The sole purpose of the home show is to promote and encourage public interest in the design, construction, ownership, beautification, decoration, furnishing, remodeling and repair of residential property in and near Atlanta.

An appealing feature of the exposition will be the erection of a five-room cottage on the auditorium stage, to be later removed to a choice lot in Chelsea Heights, and the home and lot sold to the highest bidder under sealed bids.

The exposition has the hearty endorsement of the Atlanta Real Estate Board, President W. J. Hogan Jr. declaring that "the date is ideal and should fit in well with the plans of the material men and prospective home-builders and purchasers, and should be gladly received and have a good effect. We pledge our heartiest co-operation."

Students in Contest.

More than 300 students of the elementary and higher grades of Atlanta schools are now entered in the mature home-building contest, in which prizes will be awarded. These will all be shown at the exposition. Bases on which to erect the little cut-out homes have been supplied to scores of schools, and others can secure them if desired.

The entire auditorium will be attractively flower-decorated, with landscaping in evidence throughout the building. During the afternoon and evening high-class entertainment will be provided.

The following exhibitors have already taken space:

$4 PASSENGER FARE ACROSS U. S. SEEN

At one time it looked as though the Association of American Railroads would financially back the postalization plan. They even called a special conference of regional vice presidents last May, just to talk it over, but they didn't offer any cash. At present the plan's chief "angel" is Frank R. Fagel, Kent, Ohio, manufacturer. President of the Twin Coach Company, Fagel evidently has no ax to grind.

John A. Hastings, the plan's originator, is just 39. At 21 he was the youngest member ever to be elected to the New York state senate, serving a dozen years. Remarkably active for a newcomer, Hastings worked on civil rights, financial and social measures that knocked his elderly compatriots out of their chairs. His was the first amendment to insure bank deposits. He was a pioneer in the field of saving bank life insurance legislation.

NAMING OF ALMAND PLEASES CRAWFORD

Tribute Paid to New Criminal Court Solicitor.

Satisfaction with the appointment of Bond Almand as solicitor of the criminal court of Fulton county was expressed last night by I. Leonard Crawford, first assistant solicitor, who has served nine years in the court.

"It is a source of satisfaction to all of the staff that Mr. Almand received the Governor's appointment," he said. "We feel that the record established under Solicitor McClelland, who now becomes judge of the new division of the court, will be continued."

Expenses per case have been reduced although the volume has doubled, it was pointed out.

ANCIENT SYNAGOGUE.

A group of young German Jewish refugees, members of an archaeological expedition in central Gallie, reported in the recent discovery of a 1,700-year-old synagogue. The ruins are considered important because they represent the earliest type of Hebraic religious architecture yet found in Palestine.

Under a contract with co-operating railroads, the government would advance the road the difference between the postalized fare and the fare last approved by the ICC.

The government would pay this differential only until such time as the railroad authority decided the individual railroad had progressed financially to a point where it didn't need further aid. Meanwhile, as revenues increased, this half-subsidization (payment of the differential) would have been decreasing all the time, so that no sudden drop in the road's securities would occur.

His was the first amendment to insure bank deposits. He was a pioneer in the field of saving bank life insurance legislation.

A few years after his election, Hastings laid out the present bus system for metropolitan New York. In 1936 Hastings worked out a plan for cheaper long-distance phone rates.

The actual money would not be needed, as the authority could print bonds backed by Uncle Sam, to be traded for old railroad securities, and anyone who wished to could invest in the new federal bonds, and makes for a speed of change impossible under any single one of them.

Theoretically, if not actually, the railroads would be consolidated under postalization. Any change in the capital set would spell reorganization, but government aid would enable reorganization without the usual bankruptcy. The government could act through a "railroad authority," capitalize on twenty to twenty-five billion dollars by act of congress.

the bank, its entire operation, the fundamental principles for which it was founded and the understanding of all its functions make him an ideal man to succeed Mr. Newton."

Parker's election caps a distinguished career in law and banking that began here in 1907 after his graduation from Emory, and the University of Georgia Law School.

Parker was born in Dalton, Ga., and received his early education in the grammar and high schools of Atlanta. He and Mrs. Parker live at 34 Palisades road.

Beginning the practice of law in June, 1907, as an associate of the firm of Brown & Randolph, he was later a member of the firm of Brown, Randolph & Scott, and then of the firm of Randolph, Parker & Fortson.

It was during his connection with the latter firm, in 1923, that he and his partners were made the bank's general counsel.

On the dissolution of the firm on May 1, 1930, Parker was appointed sole general counsel, and joined the firm of Colquhoun, Parker, Troutman and Arkwright, with whom he practiced until October 1, 1935, when he withdrew to devote himself exclusively to the bank's affairs.

He was appointed first vice president of the bank on March 1, 1936.

Mr. Parker is a member of St. Luke's Episcopal church, the Capital City Club, and the Chi Phi fraternity.

COUNCIL BATTLE ON PAY INCREASES TOMORROW SEEN

White Will Carry Fight To Floor, Recalling Committee Promise Not To Disturb the Budget.

A battle over proposed salary increases for 38 city hall employees amounting to more than $5,000 for the rest of the year is expected on the floor of city council tomorrow afternoon. Other matters to come before council include:

1. Designation of a city auditor.
2. Proposed merger of city and county hospital, park and recreation and planning and zoning boards.
3. Proposal to close sections of Butler street and Armstrong street for medical center.
4. Request for 40-passenger buses on the Piedmont-Ansley Park and Sylvan Hills lines.
5. Proposal for installation of 16 traffic lights.

Increases Approved.

The salary increases were approved by the finance committee but Councilman John A. White, a member of the committee, voted against them and announced his intention to carry his fight to council.

"When the budget was adopted in January, the committee promised to abide by it for the entire year, and instead of voting any other salary raises, to give the taxpayers a break," White said. "We raised salaries $50,000 a year in 1938, and in the first 45 days of this year we've already increased them $16,000. If this keeps up we're going to have to raise taxes again."

Councilmen J. Allen Couch and Cecil Hester, who recommended the salary raises to the finance committee, are expected to defend their action against White's onslaught. If adopted and approved by the mayor the increases will become effective March 1.

Merger Fight.

Another fight is expected on White's proposals to combine city and county boards.

Although approved by the ordinance committee, Couch, a member of the committee and bitter opponent of the measures, was not present at the time they were acted on favorably. He said he would oppose their passage. However, it was indicated they again would be referred to the ordinance committee.

In selecting a city auditor for 1939, council will consider the three lowest bidders recommended by the finance committee. They are Osborn & Company, $6,350; Peat, Marwick, Mitchell & Company, $6,450; and Ham Eidson & Company, $6,500.

The resolution to close sections of Butler and Armstrong streets near Grady hospital is designed to pave the way for a system of parks around the hospital as part of a projected medical center.

Request for 40-passenger buses on the Piedmont-Ansley Park lines instead of the present 32-capacity buses received favorable action by the public works committee. The resolution was introduced by Councilman White.

Will Ask Traffic Lights.

White also will ask for installation of 16 traffic lights, although Mayor Hartsfield has contended traffic lights increase the number of accidents.

Election of a successor to former Alderman Gloor Hailey will not come before council tomorrow, Councilman Howard Haire, of the sixth ward, said. Councilman Frank Wilson, the other sixth ward representative, is out of town and the two have not agreed on their recommendations for a successor, Haire said.

AMERICA'S IDEALS*Civic Leaders Will Address Joint Meeting.

Young people of Atlanta's religious, fraternal and patriotic organizations will convene at the Woman's Club auditorium at 8:15 o'clock Wednesday night in a joint observance of "Youth and Democracy Day" to hear addresses by leaders in civic affairs.

Designed to arouse a greater appreciation for Americanism, the program is being sponsored by the Atlanta and Gate City chapters of Aleph Zadik Aleph and the Atlanta and East Atlanta chapter of DeMolay. It will mark the first time that the city's youth groups, regardless of race or creed, have banded together for a common purpose, according to Chairman James Setze.

Central address for the occasion will be delivered by Judge Virlyn Moore. Other speakers include Rabbi Harry Epstein and Dr. Louis Newton. The American Legion and Salvation Army will also participate.

The Atlanta celebration has been endorsed by Emory University's Non-Fraternity Organization, Interfraternity Council and Christian Association, and has been approved by Governor Rivers and Chancellor S. V. Sanford.

Co-operating with the four sponsors are the Knights of Dunlmas, Hi-Y Clubs, and the Sons of Pericles.

NEW TAX OPPOSED.

MONROE, Ga., Feb. 18.—Walton county citizens, assembled here Thursday, adopted resolutions of "unqualified" opposition to imposition of either a gross receipts or a retail sales tax in Georgia.

Broad Scope of Proposed Medical Center at Grady

Here is a map of the proposed medical center to be built around Grady hospital. First step in the projected program will be the closing of Butler street from Gilmer street to Coca-Cola place and Armstrong street from Piedmont avenue to Pratt street and conversion of these areas into parks. Virtually the entire four blocks are now owned by Emory University, the city and the Georgia Power Company. Present and proposed buildings shown on the map are (1) negro out-patients; (2) Steiner Clinic; (3) present white Grady; (4) present white nurses' home to be future negro nurses' home; (5) future staff building; (6) medical school buildings; (7) proposed white Grady; (8) proposed negro Grady; (9) future white nurses' home; (10) addition to negro nurses' home; (11) future addition, and (12) future addition.

PLAN TO BEAUTIFY AREA NEAR GRADY

ings, including new white and negro structures for Grady.

Mr. Glenn said work on the parks would begin as soon as the proposal to close the streets is approved by council and advertised for 30 days in compliance with the law. The streets will be plowed up and planted. WPA aid will be sought. The cost of the initial project is expected to be nominal, Mr. Glenn said.

The streets to be closed are approximately 100 feet wide, including sidewalks, and 1,000 feet long, allowing ample space for the planting of shrubs and flowers, Mr. Glenn explained.

Scenic Drive Planned.

Another proposal calls for the widening of the streets surrounding the four-block area so as to provide a scenic drive around the entire medical center. These streets are Piedmont avenue, Coca-Cola place, Pratt street and Gilmer street.

Commenting upon the proposed parks development, Mayor Hartsfield said: "This is a sound piece of planning, not only for Grady hospital, but for the future development of the medical center."

The medical center is not a pipe dream with Mr. Glenn. It is a vision—a vision he wants to see materialize. For a long time he has been intensely interested in Grady hospital and what it is doing. This interest led him to be elected chairman of the board of trustees. But he wants to see the hospital expand. He can see it as a great education center for training young doctors and nurses, as well as an institution for caring for the sick and injured.

Talking with Mr. Glenn it's easy to catch his vision. He can see buildings—many buildings—dotting the landscape. In the parks and flower gardens surrounding these buildings he can see patients enjoying the warm sunshine and winning back their health as they recline in wheel-chairs or stroll among the shrubbery.

Beauty of Nature.

"Environment means a lot to a sick patient," Mr. Glenn said. "If he's in beautiful, pleasant surroundings it's much easier for him to get well. I think this medical center should be planned so that patients can get out of the hospital, if their condition permits, and enjoy some of the beauty of nature."

It seems Mr. Glenn's vision was made clearer last summer when he visited a patient in Grady.

The patient was an elderly man. He lay on his bed and gazed out the window as Mr. Glenn talked to him. He looked at the hot, glistening pavement and an uncomfortable feeling seemed to come over him. He looked up at Mr. Glenn and said:

"I have no objection to the doctors or nurses or service here at the hospital. In fact, I can't find any fault with the hospital at all, except out there..." pointing to the street. "As I lie here I can almost see the heat rising from that pavement."

Mr. Glenn came away convinced that something should be done to remove the unpleasant sights around the hospital. And from this developed the plan to lay out the parks and beauty areas.

With the development of the proposed housing project near the hospital and the proposal for the triangular park in front of the city auditorium, Mr. Glenn thinks the area around Grady could be made one of the scenic spots of the city.

CHECK ARTIST BUSY.

FITZGERALD, Ga., Feb. 18.—Several local business houses were victimized yesterday by a bad check artist, passing forged checks for small purchases and taking cash in change. The man was described as about 35 years old, slender, about five feet eight, and wearing white overalls.

Fulton Record Set in Campaign
For Polio Money

Largest sum ever raised in Fulton county in the fight against infantile paralysis was reported yesterday by Jere A. Wells, county school superintendent, who acted as chairman of the county committee for the celebration of President Roosevelt's birthday.

The total raised was $10,537.03. Wells yesterday turned over to W. V. Crowley, state treasurer of the National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis, a check for $9,771.10, the sum of $735.93 having already been accredited to the county. The total exceeded by more than $600 the amount raised in 1938.

"I would like to take this opportunity to express appreciation for the splendid work done by R. M. Cobb Jr., who was in charge of the drive in Fulton county, and for the untiring efforts of all who served on the Fulton county committee," said Wells.

JITTERBUGS SWAY AT AGNES SCOTT!

Lack of Male Partners Presents No Problem to Students.

Dancing in the modern manner, including "swing," "sweet" and "jitterbug," has taken Agnes Scott College by storm—for the first time in the institution's long and highly dignified history. There is still the problem of the lack of partners of the opposite sex but this has not proved a serious drawback. The students declare that dancing with each other is "much better than not dancing at all."

Just what started the sudden urge to learn something of up-to-date ballroom gyrations has not been made completely clear but at least part of the credit goes to one of the new-fangled phonographs which plays almost any given number of records almost indefinitely.

They're Off!
The machine was bought by voluntary contributions from the student body, plugged in to a convenient light socket—and then the fun began.

Two years ago a very small class met for one hour of instruction a week. Last year an even smaller group assembled on the same schedule. But this year it's different.

First of all came the startling announcement that "social" or "ballroom" dancing would be offered as regular extracurricular activities weekly and that it would be credited just like any other physical education course.

Next Miss Eugenia Dozier, the dance instructor, found herself snowed under with applications and Agnes Scott's "new deal" was officially under way.

Tastes Divided.
A preliminary survey shows the campus is about evenly divided on the question of "sweet" or "swing" with plenty of loyal devotees in each camp and some in both. And as far as the classes are concerned, it really doesn't matter. Instruction is being offered in the tango, the rumba, the yam, the fox-trot, the shag and the waltz with a little "Lambeth walking" thrown in for good measure.

The choice of records is also a 50-50 proposition without about half of them "hot" and the other half "soft and sweet." Popular selections include "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and "Deep Purple" from the more recent tunes and "Night and Day" from the older favorites.

In fact, everything thus far is progressing at what has been termed a "highly satisfactory" rate with only one serious complaint on record.

"The only trouble is," said one of the more accomplished pupils recently, "when we dance with people outside school they don't know all these fancy steps."

here declared Azana was ready to return to Spain if an accord were possible and his presence was necessary to carry it out.

The peace offer was made through Azana by Foreign Minister Julio Alvarez del Vayo, who returned to Madrid today.

It was believed Alvarez del Vayo's long conversation here with French Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet convinced Spanish government officials, who now hold only one-fourth of Spain, that no help would be forthcoming for further fighting from either France or Britain.

The granting of the government's wishes for assurances from Franco of no reprisals appeared to be the answer to the whole question of whether peace was imminent in Spain.

Part Satisfaction.
Previous government conditions that Franco dismiss foreign soldiers from the country and set up a regime free of foreign influence appeared to have been satisfied through Nationalist assurances to Britain.

Alvarez del Vayo previously had attempted to convince Azana that he should return to the fighting zone since he was chief of the Spanish state.

Azana consistently had refused, declaring he would do nothing to continue the bloodshed.

The President's aides described the last meeting between him and Alvarez del Vayo as "terribly bitter." The foreign minister was said to have accused Azana of making further resistance impossible because his absence from Madrid ended the legality of the government.

Threat by Azana.

Azana was said to have threatened to publish a manifesto calling upon Spanish government sympathizers to lay down their arms and refuse to follow Premier Juan Negrin and Alvarez del Vayo any longer.

He was reported to have told Alvarez del Vayo that he would immediately resign his office and "work against you if necessary" to end the conflict.

Government General Jose Miaja's inspection of the government fleet at Cartagena Friday was said by Azana's aides to have been a severe disappointment to the republican government and to have led to the one-condition peace offer.

They said that Miaja, supreme commander of land, sea and air forces in the government's remaining Madrid-Valencia area, found the fleet had been unable to put to sea because of a scarcity of trained crews and munitions.

With the fleet powerless to break the insurgent starvation blockade in the Mediterranean, it was acknowledged that military supplies and food would be completely shut off from the government.

"Faked" Signature.

It was learned Azana bitterly had reproached Negrin for having "faked" his signature on a decree published in Madrid transferring the government to that city after the fall of Catalonia.

When the decree appeared, the French government, it was said, "inquired" of Azana whether he had signed it, for he is forbidden under international law to carry on official functions while in France.

The President was said to have told Alvarez del Vayo he would publicly "denounce" Negrin if "such practices were repeated."

The Spanish government officials declared Azana was backed up by his left Republican party, Catalans and Basques in demanding peace.

Negrin, they said, had the backing of the army and workers' organizations but added that army leaders had "now realized the futility of further resistance."

The government officials declared there was no difference of opinion between Alvarez del Vayo and Azana on the impossibility of the government holding out much longer.

It was said, however, that Alvarez del Vayo entertained hopes of securing better surrender terms from Franco.

BRITAIN URGES END OF "USELESS DEFENSE"

LONDON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Diplomatic quarters represented the British government as having urged the Spanish government to day to abandon "useless defense" and to be coming the diplomatic corps for an ambassador to send to Nationalist Generalissimo Franco.

Sir George Mounsey, assistant undersecretary for foreign affairs, was said to have told the republican government's ambassador to London, Pablo de Azcarate y Florez, that Britain would recognize the Nationalists as the legitimate government of Spain "within a few days" if the government would reach responsible Franco to batter his way into Madrid.

Britain's special agent for Nationalist Spain, Sir Robert M. Hodgson, and a special representative of the French government, Senator Leon Berard, were under instructions to reach responsible Nationalist leaders in efforts to restore peace.

RIVERS' LEADERS MODIFY PROGRAM

house, has its full confidence. Harris has called upon the house already to reduce the appropriations and members are to have the opportunity probably Wednesday, when the bill reaches the floor.

"I hope we can take as much as 20 per cent off every single appropriation and allocation straight down the line," said Harris. "But I want it to be known where I'm driving. For then I'm going to insist on financing the rest assuredly."

Forced to "Starvation."

He pointed out that under the present state budget which carries an annual appropriation of $21,012,800 the various departments and agencies have been forced to a "starvation" operating basis for the last quarter of only 55 per cent of the money promised them as a result of insufficient revenue to pay in full.

Harris, instructing the appropriations committee to meet tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock and carry on until it has the budget whipped into shape, asserted:

"If economy is to be effected in state government, the only way to do it is through writing it into the appropriations bill. If you don't appropriate the money, it can't be spent."

Speaker Harris' suggestion of a 20 per cent budget cut would mean lopping off more than $4,000,000 annually from the present appropriations.

Governor Rivers, in urging that the legislature enact either a 1 per cent gross income tax, a 3 or 4 per cent sales tax or some special taxation to permit payment in full of appropriations for his program, estimated the deficiency in revenue for the purpose was approximately $8,500,000.

Would Trim in Half.

Speaker Harris' suggestion would trim this virtually in half. Several tax measures are before the house and senate which would supply the $4,000,000-odd needed under the Harris economy move without the imposition either of a gross income tax or a sales tax.

One of these is a luxury tax measure which would levy 20 per cent on soft drinks, admissions to amusement places and the like. Its author, Representative Allison, of Gwinnett, estimated this would raise $5,000,000 annually.

Another is the addition of 1 cent per gallon to the state's present 6-cent gasoline tax. Last year the 6-cent tax yielded $19,574,395.65. A 1 cent addition would mean boosting the take by more than $3,000,000 a year.

Already before the legislature are a series of bills also to street gasoline tax. Last year the intangibles tax act, to put teeth in the provisions for enforcement of the ad valorem tax, and to prevent husband and wife both from claiming $2,500 exemption in making income tax returns.

Chain Store Tax.

Smaller revenue measures also include a chain store tax bill, which is set for a special order of business on Tuesday, and proposals to lop off the rebate that oil companies and tobacco dealers get for collection of the taxes on these items.

Most legislators were of the belief that the 1 per cent gross income tax bill for which Governor Rivers expressed preference as a revenue raiser, would not survive the house ways and means committee. Others added they felt there were differences of opinion among administration forces which likewise would make the course of the 4 per cent sales tax bill also introduced as a high yield suggestion somewhat uncertain in the house especially.

The off-record view of several was that if the economy program suggested by Speaker Harris were put in effect, the legislature might pass one or two of the secondary tax measures without much fight to raise the $4,000,000 additional annually needed under an 80 per cent budget.

Avert Special Session.

Such action, these felt, would avert a special session which many believe may result if the assembly gets into a snarl over the sales or gross income tax bills and encounters adjournment day four weeks hence without having raised any added revenue.

The appropriations bill on which the Harris economy move hinges probably will reach the floor of the house Wednesday. The legislators will then set themselves up as a committee of the whole to go into every detail. The speaker is expected to turn over his gavel to an aide so he may go on the floor in person to talk about the measure.

Completed Measure.

As the assembly passed the half-way mark in its regular session, virtually the only major piece of completed legislation on its books was a measure creating a State Hospital Authority to handle the federal loan and grant-financed expansion program at Milledgeville.

A bill to repeal this has been introduced as an aftermath of legislative outbursts over the contract of Robert & Company, engineers and architects, with the State Public Welfare Department.

Representative DeLacey Allen, of Dougherty county, charged L. W. Robert, secretary of the Democratic national executive committee, and head of the firm, used his influence to get contracts and resigned as assistant secretary of the United States Treasury "to avoid a national scandal."

Attacks on Robert were echoed, with the legislature in week-end recess, with the announcement by officials of the Public Works Administration in Washington that the $1,800,000 PWA grant to Georgia would be examined closely before payments are made.

They said that if evidence of lobbying were found the money would be withheld, explaining the PWA act authorizes withholding funds when there is evidence that any consideration is to be paid for lobbying.

The house has adopted a resolution asking abrogation if possible of the Robert & Company contract for work on the $5,000,000 program at Milledgeville which the PWA grant would help finance.

This action followed charges that the 6 per cent fee allowed Robert's company might have included 1 per cent for "promotion."

Meanwhile, the house "economy" committee named at the start of the session by Speaker Harris to work on a program of efficiency in state government arranged to resume operations Monday.

With a vast volume of testimony and recommendations already behind it, Representative James Carmichael, vice chairman, asserted today, "It looks to me like the economy committee will still be at work and rendering great service to the taxpayers of Georgia at midnight on March 19 when the present session must end. GENERAL SHAKEUP OF WAR COMMAND SEEN IN DISPUTE Considerable Friction Develops Between Department and Roosevelt Over Plane Situation.

By GLADSTONE WILLIAMS, Staff Correspondent.
WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Developments over the sale of military planes to France and the consequent political repercussions heard in congress have given rise to friction between the White House and the army high command which, according to current informed sources, may lead to a general reorganization of War Department personnel.

A rather definite line of cleavage appears to be forming between President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau, on the one hand, and Secretary of War Woodring and General Malin Craig, army chief of staff, on the other.

Nothing of a sensational nature is expected to develop toward reorganization of the general staff until next summer, when General Craig reaches the statutory age of 64. At that time, however, steps to that end may be looked for unless something occurs in the meantime to relieve the growing tension. There are recurring reports even that Secretary Woodring may then be replaced by Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson, who is represented as seeing eye-to-eye with the White House attitude on the foreign plane sales.

Publication of excerpts from the testimony of various officials involved in the French plane deal has confirmed earlier reports that General Craig vigorously opposed the transaction. Secretary Woodring is supposed to have supported the Craig position.

The deal, as it has since transpired, was engineered by Secretary Morgenthau on orders from the White House. No question has been raised as to the authority of the President, but the interference, however, was resented by army men.

Something of a rift has been developing between the administration and the army generals for some time. It has a part of its beginning in the feeling on the part of the latter that the President is primarily a navy man, having been assistant secretary of the navy under the Wilson administration.

A State Divided! Two-Thirds of Georgia Already Under Eastern Time

Vividly illustrated by the map above is the "time" situation in Georgia. All the heavily shaded area enjoys eastern time. The small section to the left has central time. With approximately two-thirds of the state enjoying eastern standard time, it is, of course, idle to argue that the people in the remaining one-third would be in any way affected, except beneficially, by the change which would give the entire state eastern standard time. The house of representatives already has passed Representative David Atkinson's uniform time bill and action is expected in the senate this week.

Cardinals Dougherty, Mundelein Land in Italy for Election of Pope

"Great Love" for Nation Expressed as Princes of Church Disembark.

NAPLES, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Dennis Cardinal Dougherty, of Philadelphia, and George Cardinal Mundelein, of Chicago, landed tonight in Italy, making church history as the first American cardinals to cross the Atlantic in time to aid in election of a new pope.

(The dean of American cardinals, William Cardinal O'Connell, of Boston, is en route to Italy for the election conclave.)

They arrived on the liner Rex, which docked at 5:30 p. m. (11:30 a. m. Atlanta time) and dined aboard before disembarking to enter train for Rome.

Cardinal Dougherty, the only one of the two princes of the church to speak on the vessel's arrival, said:

"I come to Italy with sorrow for the death of the pope, whom the church mourns."

"At the same time I come here with joy because of my great love for Italy. I feel Italy to be my second country. In fact, I am 'mezzo Italiano.'"

A group of Italians around his eminence laughed with appreciation at the cardinal's use of the Italian words which mean half Italian.

The two cardinals were met by American Consul General Thomas Bowman and the consulate staff and Cardinal Dougherty expressed his pleasure at "the attention" paid by representatives of the United States.

In addition to the Dutch elm disease, American elm trees are now menaced by a virus disease which is destroying thousands of elms in the Ohio valley.

Workmen Prepare To Build 'Conclave Cells' in Papal Palace.

VATICAN CITY, Feb. 18.—Workmen deprived several scores of prelates of their quarters in the papal palace today to make room for the 210 persons who will be locked in conclave for the cardinals' election of the next pope.

Hundreds of telephones were removed and window panes were painted to prevent any leak from the secret assembly when the conclave sessions start February 28.

Balloting will begin March 1. Only the members of the Sacred College of Cardinals, now numbering 62 men, may vote, but servants, secretaries and ceremonial officials also will be locked within the "conclave city" until a new pope is elected.

Bartolomeo Nogara, director of the Vatican's famous museum; Monsignor Mella Sant'elia, papal major domo, and Monsignor Giuseppe Migone, the Pope's private almoner, were among those today who had to seek apartments elsewhere in the Vatican until after the election.

The actual conclave will start after the cardinals attend the mass of the Holy Spirit in St. Peter's.

Cells for the cardinals, who thus renounce their other duties and the world until they are able to agree on the next Pope, are made of wood.

Part of the ritual requires that the deans of the orders, the Cardinal Camerlengo, and a master of ceremonies examine every corner of the "conclave city" to see that no unauthorized person is concealed there.

The secret ballot is the elective system of the modern conclave. The balloting takes place in the Sistine chapel. The cardinals will file into the chapel every day and cast two ballots until one candidate receives a two-thirds majority.

The cardinals choose three of their number to scrutinize the ballots. Then, led by their dean, and in the order of their seniority within the college, they cast their votes in a gold chalice placed at the altar.

Rarely do early ballottings produce the necessary majority.

In order to put "drive" into the business picture, especially in the capital field.

"Strike of Capital." Some "New Dealers" have charged that there was a "strike of capital," industrialists, conceding the world's greatest accumulation of capital resources is stagnant, have contended that capital was not being invested because investors were uncertain of the future. The program, they said, is designed to remove a large part of that uncertainty.

Some of the best known figures in heavy industry, utility and finance fields, said today that they would predict that if the program goes through on lines disclosed to them, and if President Roosevelt gives the program his spoken support, that a substantial recovery would follow.

The length of such a recovery, they said, would depend upon the program receiving continued support from the President.

Their prediction was based upon the belief:

1. That the current business picture is generally discouraging, even on a basis of January 1 forecasts, although no great tangible barrier to recovery is discernible; "it simply lacks drive."

2. "Drive" jointly by business and government would remove "political uncertainty," would "start things going."

HARVARD CURATOR TO LECTURE HERE

Dr. Canavan To Speak at Academy of Medicine.

Dr. Myrtle M. Canavan, curator of the Warren Anatomical Museum of Harvard Medical School, will deliver the fifth annual E. Bates Block Memorial lecture at the Academy of Medicine at 8 o'clock Thursday night, it was announced yesterday. Members of the Fulton County Medical Society and of the medical profession throughout the state have been invited to attend.

Dr. Canavan will speak on "Changes in the Spinal Cord in Mental Disease and Defect," her subject being based on a report of 600 patients examined by the method of Weigert for demonstrating myelin sheaths. The speaker was pathologist to the Massachusetts commission for mental diseases from 1914 to 1924, with headquarters at the Boston Psychopathic hospital. She later resigned to accept her present position.

The E. Bates Block memorial lecture was a gift to the Fulton County Medical Society from members of Dr. Block's family in 1935. He was Atlanta's first neurologist, returning to the city in 1901 after 14 years of study abroad to accept the chair of nervous and mental diseases at the old Atlanta College of Physicians and Surgeons, now Emory University. He served as president of the Fulton County Medical Society in 1907.

Legislators Asked To Act on Joint Rule

Chairman of One-Government League Calls for Prompt Introduction of Fulton Amendment.

A written request for the Fulton county delegation in the general assembly to "promptly introduce and support the one-government constitutional amendment" was made yesterday by W. Eugene Harrington, chairman of the Citizens' One-Government League.

Harrington took this action because the recent notice "of a further county tax increase is new evidence that citizens must act now to improve their local government."

The league chairman asked the delegation to reach a decision by Tuesday.

"Every taxpayer," he said, "was put on notice last week by the county commissioners that they are going to raise our taxes again this year. This merely reinforces the belief of a large and growing number of our citizens that we must act now to reorganize our system of local government. If we don't, sooner or later we will be crushed under its weight."

"After careful investigation the Citizens' One-Government League is convinced that the basic cause of our governmental evils lies at the foundations of our system, and that we must first rebuild the foundations before we can expect satisfactory results. Our system was designed to meet the simple problems of rural government in an era which in this community is a thing of the past. What we need is a government capable of coping with problems of metropolitan scope in this modern metropolitan community."

"All we are asking now is that the legislature give to the people of this community the right to begin to solve this problem themselves. All the proposed constitutional amendment does is set up a local charter commission to prepare a charter for submission to the people of this community and to go into effect only if they vote to adopt it. Every community in the state except this one now has the constitutional right to consolidate overlapping city and county functions and officers. All we want is this right for Atlanta and Fulton county."

"That the sentiment for allowing the people of this community to vote on this plan is widespread is indicated by the fact that 8,000 citizens have voluntarily affixed their signatures to petitions requesting this right, and also that so far 70 persons from all sections of the community and all walks of life have signified their willingness to give active support to the movement by accepting appointment as a member of the central committee of the One-Government League."

Asks Early Decision.

"The proposed constitutional amendment to give our people the right to vote on this question has been presented to our legislators, and I have written them urging that they make a definite decision in the matter by Tuesday of next week. The central committee will meet immediately thereafter to consider our future course of action. I fail to see how our legislators can possibly refuse to introduce and actively support this amendment which merely gives the people of this community the right to express themselves on their own government."

"It has been our purpose

Principals in Satire of Soviet Russia

The two Russians in the first stage of a love scene are Jacqueline Evans, Atlanta, and Joe Phillips, Baltimore, who appear in Valentine Kataev's satire of the Soviet, "Squaring the Circle," to be presented next Thursday night in Glenn Memorial auditorium at 8:30 by the Emory University Players.

throughout this movement, and I am sure it will be the purpose of the proposed charter commission, to be entirely fair to the citizens living in that portion of Atlanta which is in DeKalb county. The rights of those citizens will be protected in every respect, including their right to determine for themselves the extent of their participation in the benefits of the new plan.

"While part of Atlanta is in DeKalb county, I do not consider that an insurmountable difficulty—the citizens in that area are as interested in Atlanta's progress as are Fulton county citizens. If given the opportunity by their legislative delegation a solution will be found. Many of these citizens are serving on the central committee."

"I want to make it perfectly clear that it is not the purpose of the One-Government League to 'carve up' DeKalb county against the will of its citizens, and that an equitable solution can be worked out even if the legislature refuses to give to the citizens of Atlanta-in-DeKalb the right to join fully in the new government. Those citizens will be able to continue the status quo or as much of it as they want by receiving the services of the new government or as many of them as they desire, just as they now receive the services of the city of Atlanta."

"They will pay, as they do now, only their share of the cost of the services they receive, and they will pay on the same basis as residential areas on the Fulton side of the line. The citizens of Fulton county have no intention of taking anything away from DeKalb—they simply want an opportunity to work out their own problems in a sensible and democratic fashion."

Russian Satire Will Be Offered By Emory Group

Bourgeois life in the new Russia will be portrayed on the Glenn Memorial stage at 8:30 o'clock next Thursday when the Emory University players present their winter production, "Squaring the Circle," three-act farce by Valentine Kataev.

With a record of an 11-year uninterrupted run in Moscow, the comedy tells the story of two couples who share a room during extreme housing conditions which followed the Russian revolution. That situation offers complications, and how the pairs discover that love cannot be put on the Soviet platform occupies most of the plot.

Leading roles will be taken by Gere Jenkins, Savannah; Paul Bankston, Chattanooga; Joe Phillips, Baltimore, and Jacqueline Evans, Atlanta. As the two couples, these four reflect present-day Russian attitudes.

Minor roles will be played by Merrill Leinbach, Henry Philler, and Eddie Gazelle, all of Atlanta. Dr. Garland G. Smith is director.

Transportation Speaker

SENATOR WHEELER.

C. A. auditorium, University homes, and the new Henry Grady gymnasium.

FREIGHT BUREAU TO HEAR WHEELER

Senate Interstate Commerce Committee Chairman To Speak Saturday.

United States Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, chairman of the senate committee on interstate commerce, will outline the nation's transportation problems to a group of outstanding southeastern industrialists in Atlanta next Saturday.

Senator Wheeler's address will be delivered at the thirty-seventh annual dinner meeting of the Atlanta Freight Bureau at the Atlanta Athletic Club at 6:30 p. m. and it will be broadcast.

Formed by Atlanta businessmen in 1902 to fight discriminatory freight rates affecting shippers, the Freight Bureau was one of the first organizations to join the present campaign against north-south differentials.

Governor Rivers, chairman of the Southeastern Governors Freight Rate Conference, will introduce Senator Wheeler. Senator Wheeler has been an outstanding opponent of repeal of the present long and short haul clause in the national transportation act. The long and short haul provision has been a controversial issue in congress for several sessions. The Atlanta bureau is opposing efforts to change it.

Early in the Roosevelt administration, Senator Wheeler joined Representative Sam Rayburn, of Texas, in pushing with Mr. Roosevelt's backing, the Wheeler-Rayburn bill containing the death sentence on all utilities holding companies, a keystone in the New Deal legislative program.

MRS. STAFFORD NAMED LEADER IN CANCER WAR

Appointed Vice Chairman of Fifth District; Educational Center To Be Opened in Atlanta.

Mrs. Bessie Shaw Stafford, former society editor of The Constitution, yesterday was appointed vice commander for the fifth district as Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, state commander of the Women's Field Army for Georgia, announced that the first state-wide educational center for control of cancer in the United States will be opened shortly in Atlanta.

Preliminary plans for the undertaking were evolved in conferences held during the week between Mrs. Ritchie, Dr. J. L. Campbell, chairman of the executive committee of the women's field army, and Dr. Ralph Mosteller, head of the cancer division of the Georgia Public Health Department.

Medical authorities agree that between one-third and one-half of the 150,000 persons who die each year from the disease could be saved by early diagnosis and prompt treatment. Mrs. Ritchie said in pointing out that the purpose of the center will be to expedite diagnoses and treatments.

Serve Entire State.

"The Atlanta Cancer Control Center will serve not only the fifth district, but the entire state," Mrs. Ritchie said, "and is in line with the far-reaching steps already taken in Georgia toward control of cancer."

"Our state-wide cancer control law is a model for other states and the cancer control educational center in Atlanta is expected to point the way for similar centers in the metropolitan areas of other states. The purpose of the center is to save lives from cancer, a disease which in 1935 accounted for one out of every eight deaths among women of 40 years of age. More women between the ages of 40 and 65 die from cancer than from any other disease or cause of death. However, experts say that in a number of instances this disease, if diagnosed and treated early, is curable."

Wide Experience.

"Mrs. Stafford will bring to our work her wide experience and her well recognized spirit of co-operation and sympathy. We are glad to have her help us in our efforts to reduce the ravages of this dread disease."

She announced completion of the state-wide staff of vice commanders of the Women's Field Army.

In addition to Mrs. Stafford, vice commanders for the ten congressional districts of the state were named as follows:

First district, Mrs. Sarah Dixon DeLoach, Savannah; second district, Mrs. Gordon Chason, Bainbridge; third district, Mrs. J. M. Murrah, Columbus; fourth district, Mrs. L. M. What Are They Doing Now? '33 Opportunity Class

A group of the first class of the Opportunity School, which met in 1921 in a Central avenue building. Today 3,200 are enrolled in the present institution at Spring and Baker streets.

Opportunity School Will Observe Eighteenth Anniversary Tuesday

By YOLANDE GWIN.

The Atlanta Opportunity school will come of age Tuesday.

Its 18th anniversary draws special attention to the growth, service and the needs of the school for vocational education and its "open door" to advancement of education and various careers.

Founded in February, 1921, as a unit of the city's public school system under the provisions of the national Smith-Hughes act and under the direction of the State Board for Vocational Education, the school has grown from a one-room institution with 37 students to the present 285 classes, 79 teachers and more than 3,200 students meeting in the main school building at Spring and Baker streets, or in stores, factories, garages and other centers most convenient to those to be served.

Under the direction of Dr. M. L. Brittain, who was then state superintendent of schools, J. F. Cannon, state supervisor of trade and industrial education, the school was founded during the administration of W. E. Dykes.

Mrs. Lota W. Orr was the organizer, teacher and first principal of the school, which was the first of its kind established in the south. Courses at the school range from beauty culture to instruction in lip-reading, and it is interesting to know that before a beauty parlor operator can touch milady's tresses she must have had 1,000 hours of training. The Opportunity school is the only public school in the state allowed to give a beauty course.

The system at the school is flexible and practical and is adjusted to the particular needs of individuals, of groups and of the changing conditions in business and industry in the city. Classes are from 8:30 o'clock in the morning until 9 at night.

Soon after Mrs. Orr's establishment as the first teacher, Mrs. Mary L. Hewey was added as a general teacher. She now teaches bookkeeping and the pre-occupational group at the school. Millinery was the first trade offered in the school, with Mrs. Edith Swearingen as teacher in the second year of the school. Since then she has had an unbroken record. During the third year, Mrs. Winnie Colvin began teaching trade sewing course and also has an unbroken record. Beauty culture was the second trade course offered by Mrs. Minnie I. Randolph and has proved a popular and profitable trade.

Looking toward an expanding program, Major P. S. Woodward, principal of the school, said yesterday he was working for a permanent building with facilities for training in all vocations for which the city offers employment.

At the birthday dinner Tuesday night at 6:30 o'clock, Dr. W. A. Sutton, superintendent of schools, will act as toastmaster and J. F. Cannon will give a history of the institution and Major Woodward will speak on "What the School Is Today." A radio playlet will be given by Dorothy Neil, a student at the school, with a group of classmates taking part.

Those designated in the Atlanta area will be notified to report to this city on next Thursday where, at a luncheon, selection will be made. Professional photographs will be taken and voice tests made, to be forwarded to Hollywood where the Gateway to Hollywood Committee will select nine boy and girl finalists, who will be sent to the film capital where the young man and the young woman to be given film contracts will be selected.

In addition to expenses, each of the 18 applicants sent to Hollywood will be given $25 a week spending money while there.

All applicants have to do to go in person or write to the Fox theater for application blank, fill it in carefully and send immediately to the Screen Test Editor of The Constitution, together with three photographs—only three—showing full and profile views.

Bryant Washburn, motion picture veteran who was one of the outstanding leading men of recent years, will arrive in the city within the next few days to work with the local committee at the luncheon which will be held Thursday at the Henry Grady hotel, to which promising candidates will be invited.

Better get your application blank today. It soon will be too late!

MEDICAL NEEDS OF YOUTH CITED

Infants and Pre-School Children Require Aid and Guidance, Says Director.

Emphasis on health programs is essential to the conservation of human resources, according to Dr. T. F. Abercrombie, director of the State Department of Public Health, with attention being paid in particular to infants and mothers.

Urging the education and supervision of midwives and the establishment of maternal and infant health centers, Dr. Abercrombie pointed out that one-fifth of all the deaths in Georgia occur among persons who have not reached the end of school age.

He stressed the need for health guidance and dietary and training for infants and preschool children to overcome physical defects. Attention also should be paid to dental defects among children.

"Examination of school children reveals that dental defects outnumber all others," Dr. Abercrombie said. "Our adults suffer from preventable dental defects of their own childhood, so it is easy to understand that increased interest in public health and the organization of county health units will promote preventive dentistry, resulting in better health."

Noted Doctors Will Gather Here For Discussion of Modern Surgery

Southeastern Congress Teaching Assembly To Open on March 6.

Virtually every phase of modern surgery will be up for discussion during the annual post-graduate teaching assembly of the Southeastern Surgical Congress, to be held at the Biltmore hotel here March 6, 7 and 8. Dr. T. C. Davison, president, announced yesterday.

The assembly, expected to attract more than 1,000 members of the profession from 10 southeastern states, will mark the Congress' tenth anniversary, and will be its "home-coming" session. The organization was formed here in 1929.

Dr. Davison and Dr. F. K. Boland, in charge of plans, have announced a program which will feature addresses and papers by 42 men outstanding in the fields of medicine and surgery and their teaching. Speakers will represent not only the area covered by the congress, but will include others of outstanding note in specialized fields throughout the nation.

Among those of national repute who will present papers during the three-day session will be Dr. Hugo Roesler, cardiologist in the department of medicine at Temple University hospital, Philadelphia; Dr. Ambrose L. Lockwood, director of surgery at Lockwood Clinic, Toronto; Dr. George Gray Ward, professor emeritus of obstetrics and gynecology at Cornell University Medical College; Dr. Morris Fishbein, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association; Dr. Walter Alvarez, of Mayo Clinic, Rochester.

Featured presentations will include an illustrated paper on "Peritoneoscopy, Its Field of Use," by Dr. Ruddock, who will outline one of the newest departures in surgical method.

Daily morning and afternoon sessions, and an extra session the night of the opening will bring to the assembled surgeons a series of papers, clinics, round-table discussions, exhibits and surgical movies declared by Dr. Boland to surpass any presentation since the organization's establishment.

A series of entertainment features for the visiting surgeons and their wives have been arranged by committees headed by Dr. Grady Clay and Mrs. George W. Fuller.

Roosevelt's Popularity Levels Off After Climb

F. D. R. Holds Same Per Cent of Party Vote as When Congress Convened, Gallup Poll Finds

By DR. GEORGE GALLUP,
Director American Institute of Public Opinion.

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—President Roosevelt's popularity, which had been rising sharply since the November mid-term elections, has leveled off this month in the presidential index of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

At the present time, after six weeks of the new "independent" congress, the Institute index shows that President Roosevelt has 58 per cent of the major party voters supporting him—just what he had when congress began—as compared with 55 1-2 per cent early in December.

The month-by-month trend since the November elections has been:

% of Majority Party Vote for Roosevelt
November	54.4
December	55.5
January	58.0
February	58.0

The President is not as popular as he was on election day, 1936, when he polled 62.5 per cent of the major party vote. But he still holds a substantial following, despite the tendency of rank and file Democrats to become more conservative over the past two years.

And apparently the congressional ruckus over foreign policy and national defense has had little effect on F. D. R.'s popular standing—one way or the other—in spite of the battle-cries of many Republicans that the President is leading the United States "along the road to war."

Today's Institute survey, which is based on a scientifically select-

POLITICAL SURVEYS GIVEN IN SUMMARY

The following is a summary of reported figures in American Institute of Public Opinion political surveys. These surveys are conducted among a cross-section of the voting population in all states.

Within each state the Institute reaches Democrats, Republicans and third party voters, farm, city and small-town voters and persons in all age and income levels, in proportion to their numbers in the voting population.

ROOSEVELT POPULARITY

ed cross-section of the voting population in all parts of the country, shows that the President's strength is still coming chiefly from the lower income group and from city voters particularly, while the opposition is strongest in the upper income levels and with farmers and small town voters.

For Roosevelt
% Major Party Vote
Upper Income Group 37%
Middle Income Group 53
Lower Income Group 75

A struggle for the vote of the middle income group, consisting of voters earning between $20 and $40 a week, is indicated by the fact that the group is almost evenly divided today between those who are "pro" Roosevelt and those who are "anti."

For Roosevelt Points of States— Today Jan. Change
New England 53% 51% +2
Mid. Atlantic 58 57 +1
East Central 54 55 -1
West Central 54 56 -2
Southern 68 68 0
Western 63 64 -1

In the six weeks since the previous Institute report on Roosevelt the President has been fighting on several fronts.

He was beaten in his attempt to have congress keep his full deficiency relief recommendation of $875,000,000. Public opinion tests recently showed that the voters are in the mood for economy, and that even 46 per cent of the Democrats think the government has been spending too much.

But there can be no doubt that the President's opening message to congress, early in January, with its challenge to the dictators, was well received by the public, and a recent preliminary Institute survey shows that about 60 per cent of the voters approve the President's principle of helping the democracies of Europe—short of going to war ourselves—if they are involved with Germany and Italy.

Never during that time has the President sunk below the 50-50 line which marks the difference between a popular majority and a minority. The closest Mr. Roosevelt ever came, the Institute index shows, was in September, 1935, when he reached 50.5 per cent following a long session of congress and after the defeat of NRA in the courts.

Will the President remain above the 50-50 line to the end of his term?

The question is important because last November, when Roosevelt's popularity dropped to only 54.4 there was a coinciding drop in Democratic party strength and the Democratic majority in congress was sharply reduced.

Jury Refuses To Drop Opposition To Creation of New Court Divisions

By HERMAN HANCOCK.

Fulton county grand jury will stand pat on its opposition to creation of new divisions of superior court and criminal court of Fulton county, it was indicated yesterday despite an appeal by W. H. Sibley, president of the Atlanta Bar Association "for withdrawal of the opposing presentments."

Sibley, under instruction of the lawyers, asked the grand jury to rescind its presentments returned in a special session last Thursday. The appeal was made to Frank R. Mitchell, foreman.

Although Mitchell yesterday declined to discuss the matter, it was understood the jury will insist on "keeping the record in a direct line of economy."

None of the grand jurors would discuss their action, asserting that Mitchell had been instructed to "contact the press when any statement is to be made," but it was said that they believe the financial condition of the county is too strained to establish two courts the cost of which is about $60,000 a year each—or a total of $120,000 a year.

Although the new division already has been established for the criminal court of Atlanta, and John S. McClelland and Bond Almand, have been appointed by Governor Rivers as judge and solicitor, respectively, the grand jury is determined, according to reports, to continue its opposition to the superior court proposal.

Likewise, grand jury members are insisting that the county be placed on a strict budgetary basis with a law with sufficient teeth "to protect the interests of the citizens and taxpayers of the county." This, it is believed, will be one of the major recommendations of the January-February body despite the fact that special presentments already have been made on the subject.

No intensive effort was believed to be under way to investigate the charges of waste and extravagance and one-man domination of the commissioners by former Commissioner George F. Longino. Dr. Charles R. Adams, commission member, made the accusations at a meeting February 9.

STYLE LEADERS FOR 1939

DE LUXE FORD V-8

Ford style leadership grows naturally out of our endless effort to build a better car. It is an outward expression of deep-down, clear-through quality. And it has a practical purpose.

Important as beauty may be, it is interesting to realize that utility dictated these changes in style. Beauty may be only a surface matter, but true functional design increases the usefulness of the car as owners drive it day by day during its long life. The style of Ford cars is but evidence of the Ford policy to build the better way.

On the De Luxe Ford, the Mercury and the Lincoln-Zephyr, smart radiator grilles are set low in front. They look better that way—and they permit more efficient cooling. The radiator fan is attached to the front end of the crankshaft, low, in position to draw the outside air directly through the radiator. Thus function guides form.

Streamlines flow from end to end, side to side. The windshield slopes neatly. Rear fenders blend handsomely into the long rear deck. But more than mere looks are important here! Streamlining first reduces wind-resistance in front and wind-drag behind. Performance is better. Gasoline goes farther.

The cars are low on the ground. This increases the impression of fleetness and grace. But more important, it increases safety! You are more secure, in these cars with the lower center of gravity, than you were in "perched-up" cars of yesterday.

All these are instances to show that style, in itself, is not so important as style with a reason. Form that grows out of function is more than beauty.

It is beauty combined with forward-looking engineering. It is a motor car at its modern best!

The unity of the Ford, Mercury and Lincoln-Zephyr family is a unity of value as well as of style. The V-type 8-cylinder and 12-cylinder engines... the economy of operation... the great comfort and safety... the appointments... the scientific soundproofing are all typical of Ford value. All are possible at the price because Ford methods, resources and experience make them possible.

Where do Ford, Mercury and Lincoln-Zephyr styles come from? They come from thinking ahead. They come from the functions of a car that underlie its outward form. And they represent, we believe we can say, another important step in pioneering by the Ford Motor Company.

AIR BASE AT GUAM FOUGHT AS HAZARD TO PEACE OF U. S.

Plan To Develop Island Declared Extremely Dangerous by Naval Affairs Committee.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(UP)—A minority of the house naval affairs committee tonight asserted that administration plans to build a $5,000,000 air base on Guam—only 1,400 miles from the Japanese mainland—involve extreme hazards to the peace of the United States.

The minority—five Republicans and a Democrat—charged that plans for development of the tiny south Pacific island is the first step toward ultimate fortification of the island which lies amid Japan's south Pacific mandate.

Authorization for the Guam development was carried in a $52,000,000 measure reported favorably to the house yesterday by a majority of the committee. The bill authorizes development of 11 naval air bases.

"Too Great a Price."

The minority report was signed by Representatives Joseph B. Shannon, Democrat, Missouri; George J. Bates, Republican, Massachusetts; Ralph E. Church, Republican, Illinois; W. Sterling Cole, Republican, New York; William E. Hess, Republican, Ohio, and Arthur B. Jenks, Republican, New Hampshire. The group charged that the bill sponsored by Committee Chairman Carl O. Vinson, Democrat, Georgia, involves "too great a price to pay" for the benefits it might produce.

"Although the work is of a minor military nature and the Navy Department has definitely declared that there is no present intention to seek further naval improvement at Guam," the minority said, "it is obvious that this work is the first and essential step to the ultimate fortification of the island."

"The hazards involved in taking a step such as this, minor though it is in itself, when done by the military establishment of the country are, to our minds, too great a price to pay for the benefits that might inure either to commercial aviation or to the naval air service."

The Vinson bill is to be called up in the house Tuesday. Church declared that "there are good prospects that Guam will be knocked out."

Representatives Melvin Maas, Republican, Minnesota, and James Mott, Republican, Oregon, both members of committee, predicted, however, that the Guam project would be retained. House minority leaders, although the party lines evidently will not be held tight on the issue, have organized a fight against the Guam base.

Moss said he believed the minority report might be "harmful" to the country.

FRENCH DIDN'T SEE BEST U. S. WARPLANS

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Disclosure that a French air mission considered only two American warplanes equal to similar German ships brought comment from War Department sources today that this government has better and faster planes than any the French saw.

The French attitude was disclosed when the senate military committee made public the record of its secret investigation of the French purchase of 100 Douglas light bombers of a new model built for entry in an army competition this spring.

This record of testimony taken January 27 and 28 revealed that Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau told the committee that the French, after looking over the field, reported they could only two models that "could stand up in the air one second" against German planes.

Japan Strengthens Asiatic Arm With Hainan

former government fighters and sympathizers.

France's strengthening of her military defenses came after reports of Italian troop concentrations near Tunisia and French Somaliland, two Fascist-occupied territories.

French troops established garrisons in a 12 1-2 mile strip of coastal territory between French Somaliland and Italian Eritrea, thus fettering possession of the area, which once had been ceded to Italy. Italian officials refused to comment on the reports of the Italian troop concentrations.

The Italian foreign affairs Review Relazioni Internazionali, however, warned that Italian troops in Spain would go to the strategic Mediterranean island of Minorca or anywhere else "the common interests of Italy and Spain demand it."

France has been reported ready to counter any Italian occupation of Minorca with a military move against Spanish Morocco. The Italian Review's article was interpreted as a warning that Italy might move against the island if Britain and France were to make any military move to draw Nationalist Spain out of Premier Mussolini's orbit.

FASCISTS POINT TO TROUBLE SPOTS

ROME, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Fascist sources, informed of reports that President Roosevelt had received alarming news from Europe, pointed to the Balearic islands and Morocco tonight as the most obvious trouble spots.

Some foreign observers thought the Italian-French colonial borders of Africa also were danger spots.

Italian tempers have been rising in harmony with a Fascist press campaign accusing Britain and France of attempting, since the fall of Barcelona, to steal the fruits of Italy's help to Nationalist Generalissimo Franco.

The Italian Foreign Affairs Review Relazioni Internazionali warned of possible Italian occupation of Minorca in the Balearics if the two democracies threatened Spanish Morocco.

This warning was inspired by reports abroad that France might counter any Italian occupation of the Mediterranean island with a military move against Spanish Morocco.

SENATOR BORAH SEES NO THREAT TO U. S.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—(AP)—Senator Borah, Republican, Idaho, said tonight he could conceive of no threat to the United States which need shorten the President's Caribbean cruise.

"I venture to say," he continued, "that the totalitarian nations will not put forth any threat against the United States or affecting the United States which need shorten the President's visit a single hour."

Meanwhile, there was no indication that the State Department had any knowledge of alarming information about conditions in Europe.

In contrast to the feverish activity in the department last fall at the time of the Munich crisis, there was relatively little activity there today.

MAN LYING ON RAILS STRUCK BY STREET CAR

A man listed as C. F. Whitworth, 26, of 557 Defoor avenue, was seriously injured last night when, according to police, he was struck by a Marietta street car, near Chattahoochee avenue.

He was admitted to Grady hospital. He suffered a compound fracture of the left arm and severe shock. G. F. Rogers, operator of the car, told Patrolmen Burton Carroll and E. G. Fitzgerald the man was lying on the tracks on a private right of way when struck.

FRENCH COLONIALS HELD IN READINESS

Italian Troops Reported on Move Near Borders of Coveted Lands.

PARIS, Feb. 18.—(AP)—France strengthened her empire defenses in Africa and put them on the alert tonight following reports of Italian troop concentrations near the borders of two Fascist-coveted French territories.

In Tunisia, French protectorate, troops were held in barracks and airplanes were made ready for immediate flight in case of trouble.

Submarine patrols surveyed the Tunisian coast and important troop reinforcements had been sent to the central stretches of Tunisia's frontier with Italian Libya.

Heavy artillery reinforcements were shipped aboard the liner Chenonceaux from Marseille to Djibouti, French colonial seaport on the Gulf of Aden and one object of the clamor for concessions aroused by the Italian press and public.

French authorities began recruiting natives in Djibouti to match Italian forces along the border of French Somaliland.

Italian forces along the frontier were reported to number 15,000. Italian Ethiopia and Eritrea border French Somaliland.

Meanwhile, as preparedness test on France's frontier with Germany, Moselle department was ordered in a "state of alert" for 36 hours beginning next Wednesday.

French troops established garrisons in a strategic 12 1-2-mile strip of coastal territory between French Somaliland and Italian Eritrea, taking an area once ceded to Italy.

Fascist tumult for fulfillment of Italy's "natural aspirations" has centered since last November 30 in clamor for Tunisia and Djibouti, capital of French Somaliland.

Italians are known to have 60,000 troops in Libya against about 35,000 French soldiers in Tunisia. Military experts, however, rate Tunisia's defenses as strong enough to repel attack by forces numerically much larger.

Atlanta Commerce Chamber To Hear Dr. George Gallup

Originator of Famed Poll To Be Special Guest of The Constitution.

Dr. George H. Gallup, originator of the famous Gallup Poll, international newspaper public opinion, will address a dinner meeting of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce at 6:30 o'clock Friday night as special guest of The Constitution.

After his address, Dr. Gallup will go to Athens, where he is to speak before the annual session of the Georgia Press Association Saturday afternoon.

Former head of the journalism department of Drake University and professor of journalism at Northwestern, Dr. Gallup has been interested in newspaper work for many years. He has been a professor in the journalism department of Columbia University since 1935.

Founder of the Quill and Scroll, international honor society for high school journalists, Dr. Gallup is also director of research for the Young & Rubicam Advertising Agency. He has held this position since 1935.

"Dr. Gallup's surveys of public opinion, which have been amazingly accurate, are one of the journalistic triumphs of the past 10 years," Albert S. Hardy, editor of the Gainesville News and chairman of the Press Institute Committee, said yesterday.

"His speech on the 'Behind-the-Scenes' of his organization is a fitting climax to this year's session, and something for all of the delegates to look forward to with great interest."

Dr. Gallup's polls, formally called "The Institute of Public Opinion," have proved so successful since their beginning here in 1935, that in 1936 he founded the "British Institute of Public Opinion." This also has been exceptionally accurate in predicting elections and measuring reader interest.

Originally founded as a medium for measuring the effectiveness of advertising, the poll has since received wide acclaim for its unerring accuracy in forecasting the results of national elections.

Dr. Gallup's results and predictions are carried regularly in The Constitution.

Speeding Auto Impales Self on Poles; 3 Hurt

A speeding automobile rammed the rear of a truck from which several poles were projecting and the vehicle was pierced lengthwise, from windshield to rear window, but three young men in the car escaped death yesterday in the crash on the Roosevelt highway, at Cook's crossing.

The trio was treated at Grady hospital. They were listed as Raymond Price, 21, who suffered a fracture of the right leg and head injuries; Jack H. Meadows, 21, and John Truitt, 23, both of whom were cut and bruised. The youths gave Columbus as their home.

Truitt, driver of the car, was arrested on charges of speeding and reckless driving. He was lodged in Fulton tower under $300 bond. R. L. Speer, truck driver, was unhurt.

FOUR NYA PROJECTS OKAYED FOR STATE

Vocational Buildings, Clubhouse, Shop and Incubator Room Listed.

Presidential approval has been given four construction projects to be built in Georgia with National Youth Administration labor. D. B. Lasseter, state director, announced yesterday.

They are a seven-room vocational building in Claxton, Evans county; a shop and incubator room at Snellville, Gwinnett county; a community clubhouse at Barwick, Brooks county, and a seven-room vocational school building at Toccoa, Stephens county.

Construction on all the projects is scheduled to begin about March 1, and be completed in approximately six months. The work will provide practical experience and related training leading to private employment for slightly more than 200 men between the ages of 18 and 24, who are out of school and jobless.

Total costs of the projects are Claxton, $17,215; Snellville, $5,346; Barwick, $5,803, and Toccoa, $13,898.

The seven-room Claxton building includes a cannery, auto, forge and wood shop, kitchen and two classrooms. It will be built of concrete blocks made on the grounds. A stone and mortar shop and incubator room will be built at Snellville. The Barwick community house will be built in a city park, for the primary use of the Future Farmers of America. The building will be of concrete blocks and pine logs. The Toccoa seven-room vocational school project involves the construction of a seven-room vocational school building, and includes excavating, carpentry, stone work, painting and similar work.

The National Youth Administration already has completed more than 70 buildings in Georgia, and are now supervising the construction of 40 others. Most of the projects are vocational buildings at high schools.

The program employs approximately 6,500 young Georgians, and expends about $100,000 a month in federal funds, plus contributions from public sponsors for materials and supervision.

OFFICE ENLARGED BY MORRIS PLAN

Lobby Expanded, Teller Windows Added.

The Morris Plan Bank of Georgia will make extensive alterations to the banking quarters at 34 Peachtree street, providing a larger lobby space for customers and additional tellers' windows, Joseph E. Birnie, executive vice president, announced last night.

An increase in volume of business greater than was anticipated when the bank was first designed, has necessitated the alterations, Mr. Birnie said.

Cost of the alterations will be between $1,500 and $2,000. Work has already begun, with no interference in regular banking activities. The alterations are to be completed by April 1.

LIONS CLUB VISITOR WILL DISCUSS CHINA

Milton Beckwith, world traveler and lecturer, will be the principal speaker at the regular meeting of the Atlanta Lions Club at 12:30 o'clock tomorrow afternoon in the Dixie ballroom of the Henry Grady hotel. His subject will be "My Years in China: Her Customs and Curiosities."

Mr. Beckwith has spent the major part of his life in China, being educated in its schools and having made a close study of the people and their customs.

Bulldogs Take Second Straight Over Crippled Jackets, 41-29

Tech Guard Problem Worse After 1st Week of Spring Drills

GEORGIA PUTS ON SPURT IN 2D HALF TO GAIN VICTORY

by Jack Troy

There has been a lot of pro and con as to the quickest knock-out on record. And it has nothing to do with the time Susie Q reached the stage where she wanted to lead the orchestra and was subdued by a Mickey Finn.

For the fact remains that, so far as box fighting in a ring is concerned, the world record is held by Carl East, of Atlanta. East set a new track record on December 19, 1938, in a bout with Duke Dyer, of Cartersville, at the Central A. C. on Luckie street.

It was erroneously reported in another Atlanta paper several weeks ago that East had belted over Dyer in 12 seconds. If this were true, he would have been tied by Battling Nelson, the durable Dane, and bettered by Al Fireman, of England.

Nelson, it seems, flattened Willie Rossler at Harvey, Ill., in 12 seconds, including the count. It isn't the record, but it's in the book as a 12-second kayo.

Fireman went to town against Rub Levine in an English bout back in 1928. When they got through counting over the listless body of Levine, only 11 and one-half seconds had expired.

This record pushes East's achievement rather close, but the Atlanta boy, who formerly lived at Haleyville, Ala., finishes in the lead with just half a second to spare.

And he can prove it. The record has been attested by J. P. Davis, official timekeeper for the State Boxing Commission. Davis' letter follows:

To whom it may concern:

"This letter is to certify I was state official timekeeper for boxing match that took place between Carl East, of Atlanta, Georgia, and Duke Dyer, of Cartersville, Ga., at the Central A. C., on Luckie street, December 19, 1938.

"I recorded the fight, and the fight lasted exactly (11) seconds, including count, and was won by Carl East with one punch."

"J. P. DAVIS, State Official Timekeeper for Boxing Commission."

FEELS ENTITLED TO IT.

Carl East does not expect to do a great deal more of fighting. He may hang up the gloves at any time. And so he feels entitled to the world record for quick knockouts since a close scrutiny of the records proves it belongs to him.

For East's record, while pushed by Nelson and Fireman, is much quicker than Jack Dempsey's knockout of Fred Fulton and Del Hawkins' kayo of Martin Flaherty. Each was 18 seconds, including count.

The record of East, who generally fights under the name of Young East, is impressive. He has won 80 per cent of 160 bouts against opposition that has included Ben Brown, Sailor Born, Scagnall Seeley, Speedy Martin and a host of other lightweights.

The only time East ever met Brown was in 1934 out at Lakewood park. Brown won an eight-round decision. Looking back, East is impressed by the fact that Brown was able to beat him.

"Brown had been fighting only two years then. I was a veteran of six years in the ring. That showed me the boy had a lot of natural ability."

East pointed out that Brown has developed a great left hand only in the last couple of years. "He has learned a lot and hits like a mule's kick with either hand. I am pulling for him in his fight against Solly Krieger, middleweight champion, next Wednesday night."

"The only thing that worries me about Brown is the fact that he doesn't fight as often as he should. He has had a long layoff going into this important fight. A fellow who wants to go to the top in boxing must keep busy. Otherwise, he'll grow stale," East declared.

HE'LL BE BUSY IF HE WINS.

Brown, whose fight with Krieger seems to be overshadowing the other feature bout between Two-Ton Tony Galento and Abe Feldman, will be busy enough in the future if he can lick Krieger.

It's no stuff that Mike Jacobs and Herman Taylor, the rival New York and Philadelphia promoters, want the winner. They need a new face in the middleweight division. And to get one out of the south to follow the late Young Stribling would serve as a natural.

Either Jacobs or Taylor would keep Brown busy. The Atlanta boy realizes what he has at stake Wednesday night and if he isn't able to win it won't be because he didn't put in time getting ready. Most of the stories out of Miami concern the conscientious way Brown is training.

There really aren't many top middleweights today. Billy Conn is almost a light-heavyweight and will step out of the picture shortly. Fred Apostoli is being cuffed around.

So the road is clear ahead for Ben Brown, the Bomber. Despite the fact that it's a non-title fight, if Brown can beat Solly Krieger, he will be regarded as the uncrowned champion and the way will be paved for him to get the title in rather short order.

They really need new faces and fight fans would find the face—and sharp hooks and jabs—of Brown most acceptable. Besides, Atlanta is a great fight town and deserves a world's champion.

CAVETTE INJURY, DEFRESE LOSS CAUSE WORRY

Sophomores Have Good Chances at Jacket Tackle Positions.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.
Tech coaches started spring football practice last Monday with a big guard problem and after a week's work face a harder task in moulding replacements at the position.

Instead of getting better the coaches' headaches are getting worse. Four fine guards were lost by graduation and two more dropped from the list last week. One will be back next season but will miss valuable practice during the spring. He is Hawk Cavette, who suffered a broken arm. The other is Hog Defreese, substitute last year, who dropped out of school because of scholastic difficulties.

GOOD PROSPECTS.

However, there are several good prospects left for the posts and Line Coach Mack Tharpe is putting them through paces in an effort to find replacements for Shorty Brooks, Mack Furlow, Junior Anderson and Allen Wilcox. From this distance, Elmer Dyke, Bill Cunningham, Butch Aderholt, Charlie Sanders and Red Hood appear the best of the lot.

The latter two are sophomores. Sanders played fullback last year but was an all-state tackle in prep school. Coach Alex moved him back to the line this season. Hood is a small but scrappy red-head who is sure to see plenty of service this year.

BUTCH ADERHOLT.

Aderholt was another moved over from tackle where he played last season. Dyke was on the Red Devils and Cunningham returned after leaving school during the middle of the season.

With the exception of the center post, where Jim Wright is expected to play first string, sophomores are counted on at tackle more than any other position.

Eston Lackey and Charlie Wood, who is not out this spring because of an operation, are the only hold-overs and Carlton Lee and Albert Muerth, two sophomores, will likely be called on for first relief.

The Jackets worked mainly on fundamentals last week but will probably start roughing it up a bit Monday.

WALKER BEATEN IN 60-YARD RUN

NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—(UP)—A pair of Canadian stars shared the spotlight with America's two best distance runners—Don Lash and Glenn Cunningham—in the classic New York A. C. track and field meet tonight in Madison Square Garden.

The men from across the border, Bill Fritz and Larry O'Connor, upset the dope by romping to upset victories as Cunningham added another shiny mile trophy to his collection and Lash copped a great two-mile race.

Cunningham, as usual, outsped the field in taking the Baxter mile for the fifth time since 1933 in 4:12.6.

Herbert Thompson, New York negro and latest sprint sensation, extended his winning streak by coming up in the last 15 yards to nip Ben Johnson, last season's star, in the final of the 60-yard dash, equalling the meet record of 6.2 seconds which is one-tenth second slower than the world record. Eulace Peacock, of the Shore A. C., Elberon, N. J., was third and Perrin Walker, of Oglethorpe, fourth.

Jack Troy Speaks To Covington Club

COVINGTON, Ga., Feb. 18.—Advance More boys' club of Covington, tonight heard an address by Jack Troy, sports editor of The Constitution, dealing with the Duke-Southern California Rose Bowl game and the worth of the west coast trips to college boys.

Officers of the boys' club include Claude Yarbrough, president; Hugh Kesler, vice president; Morton Miss Rhetie Anthony, Grady Carter and Parish Baugh, directors.

Troy spoke at the invitation of Tom Kinney, sports editor of the Covington News. The club was entertained by the victory quartet, whose members are Grover Norton, Pug McLeRoy, Miss Winford Merritt, John Merritt, G. N. Jones and Miss Grace Dooley, pianist. A splendid meal was prepared and served by the Woman's Missionary Society.

GEORGIA TECH AND GEORGIA BASKETEERS FIGHT FOR THE BALL

handed ace of the Bulldogs, is No. 13. The Tech player, No. 13, is Jim Williams. The victory was the second straight for Georgia this year against Tech.

KENTUCKY BEATS TENNESSEE, 36-34

Vals Force Game Into 2 Extra Periods; Thomas Gets 12 Points.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 18.—(P)—A field goal by Farnsley from near the foul line midway the second overtime period gave Kentucky's basketball team a thrilling 36-34 victory over Tennessee tonight before 3,500 howling fans.

The Wildcats were master of the game during the first half, holding a 19-15 lead at the intermission period. Tennessee came back strong, however, and soon equalled ahead by 23-21. The Vols pushed their margin up to 29-26, only to have Kentucky overtake them and go ahead, 31-29. A foul gave the Wildcats 32 and a foul and field goal for Tennessee knotted the count at 32-all just before the regulation game ended.

In the first five-minute overtime heat, Curtis dropped in two free throws on the fourth personal foul committed by Huffman, Tennessee guard, and Logan sniped a field goal for the Vols. The period ended with the count 34-36.

With both their first-string guards out of the game on personal fouls the Vols' defense was pierced by Farnsley midway the second overtime stanza for the winning basket.

THE BOX SCORE.
TENNESSEE—Putman, f. 8; Curtis, f. 2; Thomas, c. 12; Higgins, c. 0; Huffman, c. 0; Jennings, c. 0; Lutzell, g. 0. Totals 34.

Stagehand, Admiral Win in 1939 Debuts

Pasteurized Second to Riddle Horse; Howard Animal Equals Track Record.

MIAMI, Fla., Feb. 18.—(P)—Samuel D. Riddle's War Admiral and Maxwell D. Howard's Stagehand, expected to meet in the $50,000 added Widener challenge cup here March 4, won their first 1939 starts in different races at Hialeah park today.

War Admiral, winner of the Widener last year, won the seven-furlong $1,500 Fort Pierce purse by a half-length over Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart's Pasteurized, with J. D. Norris' Sandy Boot ten lengths back in the three-hour race.

Leading money winner of 1938 with $189,710 as a three-year-old, Bull Lea, and seven others in the $7,500 added McLennan Memorial handicap. Mythical King finished third.

War Admiral, placed outside the stalls for indulging in his usual custom of cutting up at the barrier, beat the start by two lengths and led all the way, although Jockey Wayne Wright had to ride him out to withstand Pasteurized's challenge in the stretch.

Pasteurized was a trifle slow at the start, made up ground gradually and, well ridden by Don Meade, might have won with an equal break. Sandy Boot was outclassed.

War Admiral paid $2.40, with no place or show mutuels and ran the seven furlongs in 1:22 4-5. Stagehand, the favorite, paying $6.10 for $2 in the straight mutuels, came from behind in the stretch to beat Bull Lea, which had led from the start. Jockey Jimmy Stout rated Stagehand well in the early stages and moved him up in the run down the backstretch.

The Howard horse, winner of the rich Santa Anita derby and handicap last winter, caught Bull Lea at the 70-yard pole and won going away. He stepped the mile and a furlong in 1:48 1-5, equalling the track record.

Mythical King, running as an entry with Sickle T., finished four lengths back of Bull Lea.

TULANE UPSETS L. S. U. FIVE, 36-33

Tigers Lose Four Players on Fouls; Pace Leads Scoring.

BATON ROUGE, La., Feb. 18.—(P)—Tulane's Greenies bested Louisiana State at basketball tonight, 36 to 33, the same score by which they lost to L. S. U. last night.

The Tigers lost four players on personal fouls and gave Tulane enough free-throw opportunities to gain the victory. The Greenies converted 10 free tosses.

THE BOX SCORE.
TULANE (36)—Pace, f. 13; Bodney, f. 1; Brunner, c. 2; Mandich, g. 2. Totals 36.
L. S. U. (33)—Bushman, f. 3; Vance, f. 3; Thompson, c. 0; Cress, g. 3; Jackson, g. 1; Bozeman, g. 0. Totals 33.

Score at half-time: Tulane 16, L. S. U. 15.

Free throws missed: Pace 3, Jumbo 1, Bodney 2, Brunner, Harmon, Mandich 2, Bushman 2, Vance, C. Bozeman 2, Cress 3, Jackson.

Referee: Malcolm Lantz, Alabama.

AUBURN DEFEATS SEWANEE, 39-28

SEWANEE, Tenn., Feb. 18.—(P)—Auburn swept into fifth place in the Southeastern conference race tonight by downing the University of the South, 39 to 28, in a hotly contested game.

Although the Alabama crew jumped into an early lead, the Tigers pulled even at 12 points and trailed by only one point at the half.

TWISTS ANKLE.

Dan Kirkland, Bulldog center, played well until taken out in the final half with a twisted ankle. However, it wasn't sprained and he will not be out of action. Alex McCaskill did a fine job of holding Walter Haymans, Tech's leading scoring threat, to a lone field goal.

Lampe played his entire squad of 12 men, most of the substitutes entering the game in the last six minutes when Georgia was leading, 38 to 20.

The victory gave Georgia a clean sweep of the two-game series this season. The Bulldogs won the first game in Athens, 32 to 26. It was their tenth win in 14 starts and their seventh against two in Southeastern conference competition.

Georgia maintained the Southeastern conference lead with the victory.

THE LINEUPS.

GEORGIA—Kelli, f. 4; Killian, f. 0; Rantz, f. 0; Vandiver, f. 0; Kirkland, c. 2; Stogeman, c. 4; McCaskill, g. 1; Gillespie, g. 0; Eldridge, g. 0; McDonald, g. 0. Totals 15.

By DILLON GRAHAM.
Associated Press Staff Sports Writer.
NEW YORK, Feb. 18.—One puzzling question every spring as the major league baseball clubs head to training camp is: Who'll be the rookie stars this summer?

That's a query that even the managers can't answer. Some youngsters who look like money in the bank will flop in mid-year. Others, kept on the club for no good reason, will blossom into sensations.

It's a trifle easier to inspect the various clubs, note the jobs to be filled and spot the recruits most likely to fill 'em.

Here they are:

Chicago: The Cubs paid a big price for Outfielder Joe Gleason, of Newark. He's pretty sure to stick. A pair of young pitchers who may make the grade are Al Epperly, of Indianapolis, and Kirby Higbe, of Birmingham.

Pittsburgh: The Pirates may hang on to Outfielder Fern Bell, who hit .327 at Louisville.

New York: Third-baseman George Myatt and Catcher Tom Padden from Jersey City are sure to be on hand opening day. With Hubbell and Schumacher doubtful, the Giants can use Pitchers John Wittig, Baltimore; Hal Vandenberg, Jersey City, and Manuel Salvo, San Diego.

Cincinnati: The Reds like Pitcher Charlie (Red) Barrett, who had a 16-and-3 record with Syracuse. Outfielder Tony Bongiovanni, Syracuse, and Infielders Don Lang, Albany, and Charles English, Los Angeles, may be kept for utility work.

Boston: The Bees would like Ernie Miller, Kansas City, at shortstop and John Hill, Atlanta's Southern association batting champion, at third base. Joe Sullivan, with an 18-and-10 record at Toronto, and James Doll and Tom Earley from Hartford, may make the pitching staff.

St. Louis: Paul Dean will be back again and the Cards may find a winner in Southpaw Tom Sunel, whose 21-and-5 with Atlanta was the best won-and-lost record in the Southern association.

Brooklyn: Pete Coscarart from Nashville has the inside track on second base and Fred Sington from Chattanooga likely will play in the outfield. The Dodgers have the American association's outstanding pitcher in Whitlow Wyatt, with a 23-and-7 mark, and the Southern association's top winning pitcher in Russ Evans and Bill Crouch. Both won 21. Brooklyn may find a spot for Bert Haas, Nashville infielder, whose .337 mark was second among the Southern batting leaders.

Philadelphia: First-baseman Leslie Powers and Third-baseman Merrill May from Newark, Outfielder Leland Scott, Birmingham, and Pitcher Jim Henry, Minneapolis, may stay.

New York: Charles Keller, who hit .365 at Newark, will win a regular outfield berth, while Joe Gallagher, Kansas City, may be a utility fly-chaser. Warren Roser, Newark catcher with a .387 stick figure, will assist Bill Dickey. The Yanks may retain one of a trio of Newark pitchers—Joe Egges, Donald Atley and Jack Hale.

Boston: Outfielder Ted Williams and Third-baseman Jim Tabor, Minneapolis, are pretty certain starters and Pitcher Woodrow Rich, with a 19-and-10 record at Little Rock, should hang on. Williams was American association batting champion with .366.

Detroit: Frank Croucher, Beaumont rookie who was out last year with a broken leg, will be tried at shortstop. Ed Parsons, Beaumont, will be a reserve catcher. The Tigers hope to find some pitching help from among Cletus Poffenberger and Joe Rogalski, Toledo; Lynwood (Schoolboy) Rowe, Paul Trout and John Tate, Beaumont, and Fred Hutchinson, Seattle.

Rose, with a 12-and-2 mark, and Poffenberger, with 8-and-3, are essaying comebacks. Trout appears about ready with his 22-and-6 record. Hutchinson, with 25-and-7, is the highest-priced rookie of the year.

Cleveland: Oscar Grimes, Milwaukee, should stick either as a regular second-baseman or utility infielder.

Washington: Jim Waddell, Indianapolis, and Roberto Estalella, Charlotte, are slated for first base and left field, respectively. Jake Early, Charlotte, will be a reserve catcher. Pitcher Bucky Jacobs and Infielder James Bloodworth may be kept.

Chicago: Mervin Connors, infielder up from Shreveport for a stretch last season, may be retained. The Sox may keep either Pitchers Vic Fraser, St. Paul, 17-and-7, or Arthur Herring, St. Paul, 16-and-6. Al Bejma, veteran infielder and Catcher Mike Sylvestre from St. Paul, also may stay.

Philadelphia: Bill Lillard, who hit .335 for San Francisco, is slated for an infield spot and Dee Miles, Chattanooga, for an outfield job. Bob Joyce, who won 18 games for Oakland, Henry Phippen, who had 17-and-8 with Sacramento, and Bill Beckman, who won 20 for Atlanta, may be retained.

St. Louis: The Browns hope to use a trio of San Antonio pitchers, Bill Trotter, Jack Kramer and Harry Kimberlin. Trotter won 22, Kramer picked up 20 and Kimberlin added 16. Another newcomer will be Emil Bildlil, who won 18 for Springfield.

Tech High, G. M. A. Clash for City Title

Second Place To Be Decided in Twin Bill Tuesday Night at Henry Grady.

By ROY WHITE.
Tech High and G. M. A., bitter prep rivals and co-champions in football last year, will battle at 3:30 o'clock Monday afternoon on the College Park court for the city prep league basketball championship. The game is a postponed affair from the first half of the schedule and was made necessary when G. M. A. broke Tech High's winning streak in the last round of the schedule and went into a tie with the Smithies for first place.

It was first announced that the game would be played Wednesday afternoon, but Tech High had already scheduled a game with Seawane freshmen Wednesday night at Seawane and the Seawane Military Academy on Thursday night.

Second and third places in the city prep basketball race will be determined Tuesday night in a double-header on the Henry Grady. Commercial plays Boys' High and Marist meets G. M. A. in the twin bill, postponed from February 3 in the second-half of the league's schedule.

This week's games are the last before the tournament on the Henry Grady court, starting Wednesday, March 1.

Both G. M. A. and Tech High have lost only one game in city competition, though both have been beaten several times in outside games.

Jack Pounds, Tech High's flashy little forward built up such a commanding lead among the individual scorers that only a miracle performance by any other player will wrest the lead from him. He has scored 100 points in seven games.

Pierson is leading G. M. A.'s point-getting parade. He has scored 49 points in five games, while Henry Moonsees is next with 42 points.

Tommy Stanford, Marist ace though held to one foul goal in one game and single field goals in two other games hangs in the individual race for runner-up position with 52 points.

Wallace, rangy Commercial center is another player battling for a runner-up position in the race. He has scored 47 points and passed Johnny Wyatt, Commercial's early leader, who has 45 points to his credit. Barret and Bone, are close behind for Commercial honors.

Edelstein jumped into the Boys' High scoring lead with 42 points, after a slow start.

Boys' High has used far more players than any other team in the league and consequently their players are not so close in the scoring race.

J. P. C. BATTLES NEW ORLEANS 5

Cubs Play Athens Tau Epsilon Phi in Preliminary Game.

J. P. C. varsity squad goes after its sixteenth victory of the season tonight when it battles the colorful New Orleans 5, M. H. A. quintet at the Progressives' court on Pryor street.

The J. P. C. Cubs, who have been improving every game under the direction of Coach Barney Medintz, tangle with the Tau Epsilon Phi team, from Athens. The first game starts at 7:15, and the main battle at 8:30.

The New Orleans team is tied with five other quintets for the leadership of the senior league in the Crescent City. They have won three games and lost two in league competition, and have won three out of six battles against non-league foes.

Their lineup will show Jake Becker and John Odin, forwards; Hank Cantwell, center, and Glen Delfield and Sam Mexico, guards. Four reserves, Nat Kaufman, Al Schiffman, Marx Rosenweig and "Red" Hathorn will also make the team.

The Progressives looked good in their last start, bowing over Langdale Mills, Georgia-Alabama Tangle league champions, in easy style. Ace Guard "Gabby" Greenberg missed the game because of an injured arm but will be ready for action tonight.

Coach Harold Bennett plans to start his regular lineup of Hyman and Morris Katz at forwards; Browdy, center, and Greenberg and Ginsberg, guards.

Atlanta To Call 'Em

By CHARLIE ROBERTS.
On Southern league President Major Trammell Scott's pay roll of umpires for the good year 1935 will appear the moniker of one J. B. (Red) McCutcheon.

To his many Atlanta friends that will mean that another Atlanta boy has stepped up another rung on sportsworld's success ladder.

Red played center field for Tech High nine back in the middle '20s, and later was one of the city's better apple knockers while coveting for amateur teams.

This calm, cool carrot-topped lad, who weighs close to the 200-pound mark, began his career of umpiring here a few years ago in amateur circles and was considered the best since Claude Bond.

During part of '37 and all of '38 the Red Head donned mask and chest protector as a member of the men-in-blue of the South Atlantic league—where his officiating was of the highest caliber.

His graduation to the Southern league this year is cheering news to Atlantans.

Four New Umpires Named in Southern

McCutcheon, White, Showalter, Hodge To Aid Campbell, Kober, Johnson, Blackard, Hall.

Southern League President Trammell Scott's roster of umpires for the coming year is given official sanction today. The list includes five oldsters who have proven their mettle while calling 'em under the Southern association banner, and four newcomers who enter the Scott circuit with recommendations of the highest order.

The holdover list is headed by the ever-colorful favorite of many years, Harry (Steamboat) Johnson, and H. T. (Buck) Campbell, portly standbys of seasons. Robert Kober, one of last year's best, Paul Blackard, another stand-out of '35, and William Hall, huge late season addition to Scott's men-in-blue of last year, round out the list of arbiters fans saw make decisions during the 1935 pennant chase.

Newcomers who will make their debut at Ponce de Leon and other Southern association parks in mid-April are J. B. (Red) McCutcheon, Atlanta boy; C. (Shovel) Hodge, once a Southern league hurler; Joe White and John Showalter.

McCutcheon and Hodge are making their first appearance in A-1 circles, being highly recommended graduates from the South Atlantic (Sally) circuit. Showalter was tops among Southeastern league arbiters last year. White did excellent work last year as a Texas league ump.

The Scott office, after careful consideration of all eligible umpires, feels this lineup insures the Southern league officiating of the highest caliber.

Parker Will Bolster Davis Cup Squad If He Has a Job.

By JACK GUENTHER.
SANTA ANITA PARK, Cal., Feb. 18.—(AP)—If somewhere there is a man or woman who would care to strengthen America's chances of retaining the Davis Cup, please give Frankie Parker, of Pasadena, Cal., a job.

That's what the former Milwaukee boy wonder and second singles man said today while watching a race from the roof of the Santa Anita grandstand during a lull in his duties as a ticket checker. His job ends in three weeks.

Frankie started tennis as a schoolboy and has been playing ever since. He won the national boys' title, the national junior title, and numerous sectional championships. He was ranked second to Budge in 1937 and played on the Davis Cup team that year. Last season he played only intermittently and his position dropped to eighth.

"My game is still sound," he said. "I'm just 23 now, and 23 is my lucky number. I'd like to go to Chicago in June for the national clay court tournament, then follow the mid-west swing and go east. If I can play as well as I think I can, maybe I can make the Davis Cup team again. I'm not over-confident, but with Budge out I'm as good as Mako, Sabín or the others. My game should be at its peak."

"But all this depends on the job. I thought maybe somebody would be interested enough in my tennis to give me a job so I can support my wife and still try again in tennis. A night job would be best. I could practice in the day time. But that really doesn't matter, just so it's a job—any kind."

MILEY BEATEN.
ORLANDO, Fla., Feb. 18.—(AP)—Shirley Ann Johnson, of Chicago, defeated Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., 3 and 2, here today in the finals of the Mid-Florida women's golf tournament.

Sixteen State Champions Open National Cage Meet Here Friday

WARREN QUINTET WILL REPRESENT GEORGIA IN MEET

Shep Lauter's Crew Clashes With Reserves Today for Title

From the rock-ribbed shores of Maine to the sun-kissed sands of Arizona and the frozen regions of Spokane, Wash., state champions of 15 states will meet here today to open the National Independent Basketball tournament which opens Friday at the Warren arena.

The Dallas, Texas, quintet, coached by Harry Lauter, brother of Shep Lauter, Warren mentor, was scheduled to arrive this morning. The Lone Star champions will play several exhibition games in Georgia early this week to prime their attack for national competition. They will be one of the big favorites to win this great meet.

A well-known crew of sharpshooters will return this week when Southern Bleachery, of Taylors, South Carolina champions, get back into action. The Bleachery quintet is a vastly improved club over the outfit that played J. P. C. to a standstill and defeated Warren here early in the season.

Teams are definitely entered from Kentucky, Maine, New Jersey, Tennessee, Texas, Mississippi, Arizona, Washington, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Arkansas and North Dakota. Illinois is making preparation to bring its championship club to Atlanta.

TEXAS ACES IN NATIONAL HERE

Runner-up in the national A. A. U. tournament last year, the powerful Dallas, Texas, team, coached by Harry Lauter, brother of Shep Lauter, Warren coach, will be a tough team to beat in the national invitation basketball tourney which opens Friday at Warren arena. Champions of 16 states are entered. Warren will represent Georgia. Players shown above, left to right, are Pat Sheehan, Milton Lewis and Ike Klindworth.

Warren Teams Play for State Title

Warren's two basketball teams will fight a family feud in their own backyard (the Warren arena court) this afternoon for the state basketball championship. A preliminary between the Red and the White teams will be played at 3 o'clock.

It's a case of the giant killer against the favorites, when the Reds battle the varsity.

Coach (Bill) Bradford's Reds upset the highly touted Nehi team from Columbus, 53-42, in a feature of the quarter-final round Thursday night.

That same Nehi team beat the Warren Varsity twice this season, and so the underdog Red team holds a most important victory over a team which upset the varsity twice.

Red Pittman, who was moved from the varsity to the Red team, has been the outstanding player in the tournament. He scored 19 points when the Reserves beat Georgia Extension School, 29 points in the Nehi game and 18 points in the semi-final against Four-Square.

The Reds are not conceding the varsity anything this afternoon. In fact it's the unanimous opinion that the Reds will make the big team hustle in a close battle for the state championship.

Every one has his favorite dog story. Major Trammell Scott has his. John Taintor Foote took so much of it he wrote a story about it for the Saturday Evening Post.

With coming of bird season, several Atlanta hunters used to make annual pilgrimages to south Georgia in quest of quail. The train reached Baxley early in the morning, about 3 o'clock. Most arrivals were quiet, but one year they had hardly alighted from the train when a pointer, not a fine looking dog—in fact, anything but, greeted them with great cordiality.

The hunters immediately went to the baggage car to see about their own dogs. This welcoming committee of one regarded the proceedings with interest. The Baxley dog walked in front of the hunters and their dogs, as if leading them, to the hotel—just across the street from the station.

The dogs were put in the kennels. Baxley Jack stood hard by. The minute the food was put before the city dogs, Baxley Jack sprang in, gave each pan one slap. One slap was all Baxley Jack needed to clean a pan without leaving a crumb. Baxley Jack wanted to sleep in the room with the hunters and, denied this privilege, he curled up in front of the door and slept.

Red Devil Faces Jack McAdams Monday

At last! The big match of the year—the battle all wrestling fans of Atlanta have been waiting to see.

Jack McAdams, holder of the southern light heavyweight title, will meet the Red Devil, strange masked warrior, in the main event at Warren arena Monday night.

Archery Club Holds Monthly Meet Today

The Atlanta Archery Club will hold its monthly tournament today on its shooting range at the water works, on Northside drive. Shooting will start promptly at 1:30 p. m.

'Bolling' Greatest Cracker First Baseman'

Lady Fan Likes Tobacco-Chewing Players--Raps Uniform Idea

Editor's Note: 'Round and 'round the Roving Reporter goes; And where he stops, only a Cracker fan knows.

By THAD HOLT.

"Give me hard-hitting, curve-throwing, tobacco-spitting ball players," demands Miss Mary E. King, who works at a Drivurself station on Auburn avenue.

"I read with interest your article of February 9 as to what the well-dressed baseball player should wear," she said.

"Maybe the young ladies you interviewed gave you the well-known razzberries when they suggested that the players should wear."

"Long pants, polo shirts, white shoes—bonnets with straps under the chin. Phooey! Who wants a sissy baseball player?"

About the time the model "T" got to the farm Baxley Jack got there and wasn't breathing nearly as hard as the model "T." The hunters asked the farmer to lock up Baxley Jack, so he wouldn't mess up the dog work. The farmer looked down at Baxley Jack and laughed.

They wanted to know what was funny. The farmer smiled and said, "If you take this dog with you, by the time you get back, you'll know what I'm tickled at."

Well, Baxley Jack found covey after covey. The only birds the other dogs found were two or three singles, which Baxley Jack didn't have time to fool with. Baxley Jack soon realized he knew more about the country than the hunters and he wore them out trying to keep up with him as he searched the south Georgia fields.

HAROLD BENNETT He played with Fritz Oetting.

And what player would you get in a get-up like that? Next, someone will suggest 'culottes' (because they are cool). Oh well, thank goodness, the men still have something to say about what they wear.

One could find me at the ball park most any time—even if they played in their undies. I go to the game to help boost Atlanta to the pennant and not to moon over the players. Besides, most of them are married, anyway.

A LONG TIME.

"So come on, baseball season! It's been a long time since I yelled 'Slide, buddy slide.'"

One of the more interesting Cracker fans to be interviewed was Captain John Henry Marston, 74 years old, who says he came up out of the ground with the Candler building 54 years ago. He has worked there as a carpenter ever since.

PICARD SHOOT THIRD-ROUND 68, LEADS WITH 209

McSpaden Second With 214; Harry Cooper Takes Bad Slump

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 18.—(AP)—Golf's professional army gave Henry G. Picard, of Hershey, Pa., an inch today and the ambling, smooth-stroking sharpshooter took five miles of leeway as the club-swinging brigade completed 54 holes of scrapping for the $10,000 Crescent City open purse.

His opposition pulled their best shots in an effort to overhaul the tall Pennsylvania pro, who held a one-stroke lead going into the day's 18-hole round, but the 31-year-old veteran stepped out to another great exhibition of putting to crack par for the second straight round in the tussle for top money of $2,000.

Picard's great third-round 68, four blows under the City Park course par, came from fine recovery shots as well as uncanny putting, and gave him a five-stroke lead over his nearest rival at the close of 54 holes of play.

JACKETS MEET GAMECOCK FIVE

Tech and Georgia's basketball teams will swing into the home stretch of their season this week. Both teams have three more games to play.

Georgia added a last-minute foe to her schedule and will play Miami Wednesday night in Athens. The other Bulldog opponents are Southeastern conference teams. Sewanee will furnish opposition Friday and Tennessee Saturday night as Elmer Lampe's five swings into Knoxville before the annual tournament in March.

Tech likewise has two league games in addition to the South Carolina contest, which will be played in Atlanta Tuesday night. The Jackets face Auburn in Auburn Wednesday as a part of the "greater Auburn Day" program.

The Tigers will come to Atlanta next Monday night to close the Jackets' season at the Tech gym. Georgia and Miami have met for the last two years on the gridiron, but Wednesday night's game is the first court battle between the two teams.

The Bulldogs will be favored to win the game, but it will be a close one. The Jackets will be underdogs against Tennessee on the Knoxville court. However, Lampe's boys should gain valuable experience for the tournament which will be played on the same floor.

Jack should have little trouble with the Gamecocks, but if Jim Hughes doesn't get back in the lineup, will be underdog against Auburn, especially in the first game on the Tigers' court.

Flycasters Meet Here Monday Night

The Atlanta Flycasting Club will hold the next meeting Monday night in the Kimball House. Films of champion fly and bait casters will be shown at this meeting if they arrive in time.

Bait casting instructions have been added and Everett Roach will supervise this activity. Inspection of members' tackle will be a feature of Monday night.

had one of his characters to say this about Baxley Jack: "He's the bird-finder's fool that ever was let out of a dog wagon."

Takes Off Ugly Fat

If you want to take off ugly fat easily and pleasantly all you have to do is—

First, eat sensibly, which means you avoid over-eating. Second, mix 1/4 of a glass of Welch's Grape Juice with 1/4 of a glass of water and drink before meals and at bedtime. Thus you reduce caloric intake considerably. But you do not suffer a hungry moment. There are no strenuous exercises or taking harmful drugs. Yet—in a test conducted by Dr. Danrauw with this method among a group of intelligent and cooperative people who followed directions implicitly, an average weight loss of 10 pounds was registered per month.

This remarkable method is just as beneficial and effective for overweight men as it is for overweight women. There is only one thing to watch: Eat sensibly. Welch's Grape Juice means you avoid over-eating; and be sure to use Welch's Grape Juice—always and only from the pick of the grape crop; always full strength; always pure.

Try This Amazing Welch's Tomato Juice

If you think all Tomato Juice is alike, try Welch's new, vitamin-rich Tomato Juice. It is so rich and thick you can add 1/4 water or ice and still have a most delicious Tomato Juice.

ATLANTA, GA., FEBRUARY 19, 1939.

FAVORITE CHILDREN?

Georgia, through its various governmental departments and bureaus, undertakes to perform a wide variety of services for the citizens of the state. For the performance of these services, revenue is collected in the form of taxes, fees, licenses and other charges.

The legislature of the state, now in session, is faced with the difficult task of devising ways and means to increase this revenue by some $8,000,000 annually, the amount said to be necessary if the services performed, and approved by the people, are to be satisfactorily continued.

It might be well, under these circumstances, to look into the present revenue of the state, its total and the manner in which it is divided among the various departments and state bureaus, etc. Not, primarily, with any purpose of finding within the present income the $8,000,000 deficit, but of studying the present allocations of funds and attempting to find the road by which any unavoidable revenue shortage may be distributed without excessive restrictions upon any one department.

During the last fiscal year Georgia collected, from all sources, a total revenue of approximately $48,000,000. This may, however, be roughly divided into two classes of funds, the allocated and the unallocated. The allocated funds, or those set aside for a specific purpose, under the law, immediately they are collected, amounted to about $27,000,000. The remainder, $21,000,000, represents the money which actually goes into the general treasury of the state, to be used according to the appropriations approved by the legislature.

There is, in operation in Georgia, what is known as the "grandfather clause." This provides that, when revenue fails to come up to the amount needed to meet all appropriations, the Governor may prorogue the deficit among the various activities to which the money has been appropriated. Thus if there is a shortage of ten per cent, the Governor is authorized to meet that shortage by reducing all appropriations ten per cent.

It must be remembered, however, that this "grandfather clause" applies only to appropriations from the general treasury, the unallocated funds. The $27,000,000 in funds set aside for specific purposes cannot be touched.

Furthermore it must be understood that, of the allocated funds, approximately $15,000,000 is not spent by the state at all, but is sent to the various counties and to the county and city school systems. There is left, therefore, about $12,000,000 in special funds to be added to those unassigned in the general treasury. Of this $12,000,000 by far the greater part is money for the State Highway Department, derived from the gasoline tax and the automobile license tag fees. Much of the highway department revenue is needed for necessary matching of federal road funds, as well as for maintenance of present roads.

Of the residue of allocated funds there are various items which cannot be touched, such as the funds set aside for amortization of bonded indebtedness, made from the discounting of Western & Atlantic Railroad rental; and so forth.

The question has been raised as to why the "grandfather clause" cannot be applied to all state expenditures, including both the allocated and unallocated funds. It will be seen from the foregoing analysis that, unless the local government authorities and the schools are to be subject to emergency reduction, this could at best apply only to a small proportion of this section of the state's revenue.

Logic indicates that all collections of funds by the state should be paid into the state treasury and that the "grandfather clause" should be made applicable, on equal basis, to all functions of state government.

If this were done there would be a greater spread in the reduction of state appropriations in any future emergency. Instead of placing the burden on the $21,000,000 in unallocated funds alone, it would be equally distributed over more than twice that sum—if the county, school and highway funds are included. Without these there would not be much change in the situation.

It is, of course, possible that the legislature, by instituting new economies in state activities, by slashing the general appropriations the $4,000,000 requested by Speaker Roy Harris, of the house, and by a comparatively small increase in the tax burden, may be able to eliminate the $8,000,000 gap between Georgia's official income and outgo.

And it is inevitable that any proposal to make bureaus or departments now operating on specially allocated funds susceptible to the "grandfather clause" will meet with prompt opposition from those affected.

Nevertheless, in the interest of justice to all and of economy in the running of the state, it is a proposal worthy of serious consideration. Maybe its undesirable features would outweigh its benefits. Or vice versa. But the suggestion should, at least, be considered as a possibility, while the legislature is wrestling with the financial problems of the state.

JAYCEE ACHIEVEMENTS

An opportunity for civic service on the part of the young businessmen of Atlanta has been offered since 1921 through the medium of the Junior Chamber of Commerce, of which 500 are now members. This organization has implemented and supplemented the work of the senior chamber to such an extent it has earned an enviable place in the annals of the many civic improvements obtained through concerted efforts of the various bodies.

During the year the Jaycee program has become so ambitious expansion has become necessary if the organization is to continue the work which it has outlined. In the past its activities have reached into almost every Atlanta home of every strata, and few have been the civic campaigns of real worth in which it has not participated. Among these have been the acquisition of Candler field and, later, the administration building; the anti-loan shark campaign; the Safety First drives; the Georgia Tech building program; the Homeless Families campaign; the Clean-Up and Paint-Up campaign; the Progress and Prosperity campaign; the Get-Out-the-Vote campaign, which it organized; the Atlanta symphony orchestra; the Atlanta Legal Aid Society, also organized by the Jaycees; the Georgia Highway Patrol campaign; the Toy Lending Library and the Anti-Noise campaign.

Each of these achievements has meant something substantial to Atlanta and to the citizens of Georgia. Their merits have been weighed by the great measure of service they have afforded.

The Junior Chamber of Commerce is now offering to other young businessmen of the city an opportunity to join in this work; an opportunity to give direction to their efforts in making Atlanta a greater city; an opportunity to join their associates in the work of building with youth.

Few organizations offer the youth of Atlanta a better opportunity for service, and it is almost assured that the membership goal of the group will be quickly reached.

BROTHERHOOD WEEK

The observance of Brotherhood Week—February 19-26—seems particularly appropriate this year because of the spreading of the unbrotherly spirit in many lands.

The population of the United States is made up of people, or descendants of settlers, from 40 Old-World nations—people of all racial strains, followers of every religious belief. The spirit of brotherhood should prevail here as nowhere else. Yet, paradoxically, the nation has more to fear, it seems, from subversive elements within, stirring up class hatred; than from attack or propaganda from abroad.

Strife between racial and religious groups, regardless of its origin, is unwanted in the United States. It was such strife, deliberately introduced in Europe, setting faction against faction, that has enabled dictatorial elements to step in at the psychological time under the guise of restoring order. Democracy cannot endure in a land with class hatred because democracy is built upon mutual trust and understanding.

Certain subversive elements, however, are constantly at work to weaken the people's faith in democracy. Their propaganda takes its most vicious form in libelous campaigns against racial and religious groups. Much of it is disseminated under the guise of high-sounding, patriotic phrases, but it is far from being patriotic. Attempts to blame any single group for the nation's economic ills, or for introducing so-called ideological systems, are vicious.

The people of the United States should set an example to the world by turning away from doctrines founded on hatred and intolerance. Denial of religious liberty—no matter how large and important or small and unimportant the groups may seem—is nothing less than a return to the customs of the dark ages. Now is the time for discarding prejudices and intolerance, not for a week, but permanently.

With a radio set, a trapper, alone for 11 years on a Hudson Bay island, has kept in touch with what used to be civilization.

The pressure persists for putting that west coast labor leader on a ship to Australia. It is part of a campaign for more water under bridges.

Though doing nicely in Hollywood, Flyer Corrigan still rides to and fro on a bus, as traveling the wrong way in cabs is only for millionaires.

ONE WORD MORE

By RALPH MCGILL.

PULSE FEELERS Physicians who consider themselves expert pulse feelers ought to pay a visit to the state legislature, more particularly the house.

There they will discover the perfect pulse of the house as it is sensitive to the slightest pulse of public feeling as a hay-fever sufferer to the slightest bit of pollen wafting on the dulcet autumn breeze.

There are citizens meetings being held in many communities. It is unfortunate that they do not have all the facts presented calmly and dispassionately. But that merely is unfortunate. The facts are that many people are angry about taxes. There is what amounts to a tax revolt in the state and no one knows it better than the state legislator. He hears from the meetings, as one always hears from organized groups. His own pulse leaps in unison with the pulse of each constituent.

It ought to be pointed out, to keep the record straight, that the economy committee is taking its figures from the audit which was published. There is no uncovering of hidden facts. The public, already aroused about taxation, greets each investigated item with further anger, most of which is justified. In the old days committees had to get their facts the hard way. There is no evidence of graft. Waste? Yes. But no hidden graft. It's all in print.

RAPID REACTIONS The reactions are not at all typical. For instance, one naturally would have assumed that the disclosures by Hiram Evans, head of the Klan, would have aroused the greatest public indignation. The road asphalt disclosures were not all that could be desired.

Yet, because no figures were available, this did not attract great attention. The Milledgeville hospital buildings and their contract, exploded. Mr. Chip Robert, engineer and architect, has a legal contract. There is no evidence it was arrived at except in an open conference. The accepted fee is six per cent. It is not customary in any state in such matters, to call for bids no more than the calls made when a doctor is called in. The bill which would throw all the architectural work into the schools will be expensive and unsatisfactory. All this is offered, not as evidence for the defense or the prosecution, but merely to point out that because the fee, approximately $300,000, was set down in cold figures, it made many people indignant who did not even lift a curious eyebrow at the Evans investigation. Pulses began to leap in every county.

So, one never knows. The legislature knows how to stand ready to jump to the point of view of the public. If the legislature seems to be feverish and if its few eccentric members seem to be making more than usual the number of eccentric speeches, it means the folks back home are feverish. The best pulse feelers are the boys in the legislature.

EVERYONE AGREES Everyone agrees the economy work should be done. The public generally agrees. It is important. Not a dissenting voice has been heard.

But thoughtful people are concerned lest the legislature in its new and sudden enthusiasm, kept fresh by the pulses back home, go too far in its enthusiasm and cut out some very useful services and some very necessary work.

It is not at all a question of personalities. It is a question of necessary state services. Political appointees have a way of leaving jobs while the axe falls on those doing the real job. The result is a loss in efficiency and service.

No one questions economy and the legislature's sincere desire to do something about it. Yet there always must be the question of why the legislature, if really interested in economy, does not vote for a civil service bill and for a reduction in the number of counties in Georgia.

A reduction in counties, elimination of duplicate duties, and a few other less important reforms, would work real economy and put the state on a workable basis.

AS TO TAXES It is very highly improbable this session will produce any tax legislation. If so, it likely will be a further addition to the "nuisance" taxes which will solve nothing at all. They will but add to the patchwork tax system with which the state has been struggling for years.

The majority agree there will be an extra session. What happens in the meanwhile? The schools will close. The state cannot borrow any more. Most of the welfare work will cease. Other functions of government will halt.

The cold reality remains. The state ought to have a revised tax system. The ways of Democracy are slow. Even though it be at times disappointing, it remains the best way. We'll have one yet, if not in 1939, then in another year. But we need it in 1939.

SILHOUETTES

By RALPH T. JONES.

He said:
I've tried hard
To hold up my chin,
To smile, to whistle a song,
To greet every friend
With a confident grin,
To act as though
Nothing is wrong.

I try not to worry
About overdue bills,
Or the rent
That hasn't been paid;
I lie to the wife,
Though fear my heart fills,
And tell her that I'm not dismayed.

But it's tough to keep on,
Tramping the street,
Day in and day out,
Without work;
Pretending you're happy
To each one you meet,
While demons of Starvation smirk.

Is This A Quotation?
I heard someone, the other day, use a phrase that haunts me as being a quotation. Yet I can't place it, nor can I find it in any reference books to hand. It goes something like this:

"I used to weep because I had no shoes, until I met a man who had no feet."

That is a very liberal transcription, maybe not much like the real quotation. But it conveys the idea, and the references to lack of shoes and lack of feet are correct.

If Each Would Seek
The Less Fortunate.
Anyway, the thought provides a jumping-off place for considerable reflection. It contains, possibly, the germ of the idea which might,
if all men would follow the precept, solve all the ills of the world.

For, imagine how many sorrows and misfortunes and handicaps could be overcome if each one of us could forget our own troubles in efforts to help the other fellow, whose cause for regret and worry is a little more serious than our own.

It is notorious, and true, that the greater human charities are found among the poorer people.
The man who has only two crusts of bread in all the world is more apt to divide with the man who has none, than is the possessor of a bakery. As a general rule.

Even Christ recognized this human trait, in His story of the poor widow and her mite.

Perhaps as possessions grow greater we cling to them the more tightly, afraid to lose. The fall from affluence to hunger is, of course, greater for the millionaire than for the owner of a single loaf.
The contrast is more severe.

But wouldn't it add immeasurably to the world's happiness if every one of us would seek out someone a little less fortunate than ourselves and do all we could to help them up a little on the ladder of content and comfort? It wouldn't need to be much, just a little help from everyone to the other fellow would mean such a lot in the sum total of generosity.

Just Supposing—
Just supposing that some fellow making $10 a week is bedeviled by a $25 debt. And a friend making $25 a week comes along and pays the $25 debt for him.

Then the $25 a week man is pestered by overdue bills amounting to, let us say, $200. And the fellow earning $5,000 a year pays those bills of $200 for the man earning one quarter as much. It should be easy for the $5,000 a year man to do that.

But he, in turn, owes a couple of thousand. Well, isn't there some one with an income of $100,000 or so who would provide $2,000 without feeling it?

And the debts of the $100,000 a year man? Find a millionaire to take care of them. The debts of the millionaire? Shucks, guys with a million bucks shouldn't go in debt!

But, To Return
To the Serious—
However, after that flight into realms of foolish fantasy, isn't there a real thought in the suggestion of extending help to the more unfortunate? And, no matter how tough your lot may be, rest assured there are more unlucky ones. Even though you lack shoes, there is always someone who has no feet at all.

Look around. You'll find 'em.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.
From the news columns of
Thursday, February 19, 1914:
"Washington, February 18.—The administration Alaskan railroad bill authorizing the president to construct a $35,000,000 railroad from Alaska's coast to its great coal fields, was passed by the house late today by a vote of 230 to 87."

And Fifty Years Ago.
From the news columns of
Tuesday, February 19, 1889:
"The Boston Esoteric College of Theosophy" has dissolved. The president was caught with two links of bologna sausage in his coat-tail pockets."

Memory Eternal.
When once these fellows were fired with setting the flowers fold when day was done—
Remember how we found a bluebird's nest;
And, coming home at dusk, saw Bright stars across the sky like silver rain;
How rapture filled our hearts, too bright to know
And how we wept at parting of the ways?
And when I see a moon's returning
Of gold upon the sky, or hear the singing
Of a bird I know I cannot hide
The pain that memory will then be Through distant years of twilight
The thought of you will never, never fade!

Text and Pretext

By M. ASHBY JONES.

JOSEPH THE GENTLEMAN.

The Old Testament is the story of the gradual revelation of God in human experiences. In all of these stories, no matter what the subject may be—a tribe, a family, or an individual—Jehovah is the real hero. They are divine revelations, not because God tells the stories, but because God is revealed in them.

Our King James version says, "He made him a coat of many colors." This should be translated, "a coat with long sleeves." In other words he made him a "gentleman's coat." The significance of the "long sleeves" is that you can't work with long sleeves, and the definition of "gentleman," which has persisted with its poisonous influence even to this day, is that a gentleman does no work.

One may see here how early in the history of our society there was created this artificial distinction of aristocracy. It meant then, and has meant ever since, that a small minority are privileged to wear "coats with long sleeves" and have other people work for them.

The picture here is quite vivid and significant. Joseph the young-est son, "all dressed up and nowhere to go"—worse than that, nothing to do—stands around with a self-superior air, and talks about himself, while the other boys are working and earning their money. He is surprised to find that he is a critic of the work which the others are doing. The idle onlooker usually is. He adds to this the hateful role of "fellow," as the children say, and reports the shortcomings of his brothers to his father. The attitude of dislike growing finally into hatred on the part of his brothers, was inevitable and true to life. One can hardly blame, but pity Joseph. He was the logical result of a foolish father's, false definition of a "gentleman."

Dreams.
It is almost certain that one whose waking hours are so completely possessed by an egotistic consciousness of his superiority, when he lies down to sleep will dream dreams of his own greatness.

The stuff which dreams are made of, are the experiences of our waking hours. So Joseph dreamed that they were all binding sheaves in the field. His sheaf "stood upright," while the sheaves of all his brethren made a circle about it and bowed down to him. Joseph "committed the deadly offense of going out into the field in his "gentleman's coat," where his brothers were working, and telling them of his dream. There follows another dream to the young egotist, "the sun, the moon and the eleven stars, made obeisance to me." When he repeated this also to his brothers, "they hated him yet the more."

Of course, dreams in those days were popularly supposed to be the prophecies of coming events. Among the early Hebrews they were accounted as Jehovah's revelations. So these elder brothers now saw Joseph not only as the favorite of their father, but also the favorite of Jehovah. The story of the young man who came from a foreign land is not simply the story of human nature, but reveals their religious conceptions as well. Jehovah was their tribal God, and there were definite limitations to His jurisdiction. He ruled in the pasture lands of Canaan. Egypt was a long way off, and perhaps some other god rules there. To get Joseph away into a strange land would in all probability frustrate Jehovah in the fulfillment of His plans concerning Joseph.

A Divine Revelation.
As we have said, these Old Testament stories tell of the gradual revelation of God in human lives. First there is revealed Jehovah a tribal God, whose power and jurisdiction is limited. Then as the story unfolds Jacob and his sons discover that this same God rules in far away Egypt also. Up to that time we have Jacob's idea of a gentleman, and Jacob's plan for the life of Joseph. But the last part of the story is the revealing of God's plan, and God's definition of a gentleman. It is also God's method for the development of character. Instead of dressing him up and parading him in luxurious ease before others, he is stripped of his "gentleman's coat," and in the hard experiences which follow, the splendid possibilities of a true gentleman are revealed in this same Joseph.

The whole teaching that we are God's children made in His image, means that we have latent and undeveloped faculties which are divine, and that we are capable of growing into His likeness. But these powers will never be developed by waiting in smug self-satisfaction for others to serve us. We are of worth and importance in proportion as we serve others, and one's divine likeness is only developed as in self-forgetfulness he calls upon those powers to make a contribution to the welfare of the world. That is what happened when this Hebrew lad was taken away from the foolish ministries of his father. Through hardship and suffering he became a great workman and servant of mankind. Jesus said a long time afterward, "We who would be greatest among you, let him become your servant."

SAMSON'S PILLARS

By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY.

Here we are in Buffalo, Sam and I. We have been to Easton, Pennsylvania, and Sam is on his way to Cleveland. I'm going to Painesville in Ohio to tell them the facts of international life. He has a long wait for a train, so we took a room in a hotel, turned on the radio, lit our pipes and began a diligent reading of the morning newspapers.

"A great argument that kid gave you last night," Sam opened up. "You can't blame him, Sam. If he reads it in a book, he believes it," I replied.

"That's why I don't read books," Sok. Sam announced, "I don't want some long-haired bumbino who don't know the why and wherefore to put any curse on me. I know what I know and no pen-pusher can twist me around his pinkie with whereas and wherefores."

"Look out, Sam!" I shouted laughingly, "write books, too." "So what?" Sam replied in utter contempt.

"Let me tell you something. I hit one of them smart bumbinos out of Washington one day. He looked like an angel just out of an incubator but he was improving the world for Uncle Sam. So I asked him if he knows you. So he says, 'Yes.' He says you have a depraved mind. So I says to him, 'How Come?' So he says in your heart of hearts you are a true friend of the people but because you make more money at it, you are a capitalist. So I want to paste him one but I says to myself, 'Go easy and start an argument. Maybe if you paste him, they'll examine your income tax.' So I argue.

"I says to this bumbino, 'What you got against making money?' FOR "SOCIAL VALUES."

"Don't get me wrong," says he. "I ain't against making money, but I'm for social values."

"So I look him in the eye square and says, 'Boy howdy, you figure them social values that you're for?'"

"So he says, 'What do you mean figure?'"

"So I says, 'If you got value, you must be able to figure. Now I can figure anything cause I go by dollars and cents value. I know that if the customer has plenty of mazzuma, he can buy plenty of goods. That if the goods is good, they fetch a good price. That if the folks are in hock or they're broke, their credit is lousy. I got a yardstick. I can figure costs, expenses, income and outgo. Now give me your lineup on this social value."

"So this smart boy, he says to me, 'My good man, proud-like, you're too materialistic.' "That's me right," I answers. "I sell materials."

"I don't mean that way," says he. "I mean you have no spirituality. I mean that you do not take in consideration the government's responsibility for the welfare of its citizens."

"THIS RICH MAN'S SON"
"You could have knocked me down with Ferdinand the bull's flowers. This two-by-four guy ain't never been married, ain't never built something or bust his heart trying to do it. This rich man's son who was kept in college by his father and then, like he told me himself, hopped from college onto the taxpayers' swindle sheet where he gets himself a job wondering how he can get for the government to go broke by spending or to go broke by lending. This guy tells me that I don't get no idea what the welfare of the people is. I could've pasted him that time. But I says, 'Sam, hold that car in! You left that guy here! I'll haul you in front of Saint Frank Murphy for knocking out his civil liberties.'"

"So I says, 'Brother, let's get down to earth. Suppose you fellows bust the country by spending and you get the citizens by taking, how about this welfare you talk about?'"

"So he says, 'You got that all wrong, too. The government can't go bust.'"

"So I says, 'Maybe I'm a dope and you got some. If we got some, let's teach in the public schools. But the way I figure, if anybody spends more than he gets, he must some day go broke. It stands to reason that if you pay out what you ain't got, some day the sheriff will come along and auction off the works.'"

"That's old-fashioned economism," says he. "Nowadays, we believe that the total national wealth of the country is the basis for calculating national assets. That means that the government calculates not on its income from taxes et cetera, but on the broader base of the national wealth." Sok, so help me I repeat every word he said like it was in a book.

HE READ IT IN A BOOK
"I look at this bumbino with the four dollar words and I see he ain't kidding me. He believes every word he said cause he read it in a book."

"So I says, 'Look here, sonny, if you're right, I ain't got one damn cent in the whole world. This quarter which I will give this Pullman porter when he brushes off my hat that ain't dusty ain't my quarter and when I give it to him, it ain't his quarter. It's Mr. Morgenthau's quarter, only he lets me kid myself into believing that it's my quarter. And later on, he'll let that Pullman porter go into a hop trance believing it's his quarter. But really and truly, it belongs to Uncle Sam.'"

"So let me ask you one. If I can't get nothing that's mine why should I spend nights in Pullman berths and days in lousy hotels? Why should I eat in coffee shops and have to hear a customer give me back talk? Why can't I stay home with my Cyrella and the babies and listen to the radio give us the latest from Jockies or the Farn and Home Hour or some thing like that? Why should I worry my head and get diabetes? If my money and my furniture and my wife's diamond ring is a broad base like you said, let Mr. Morgenthau do the worrying."

"That's why I say that this guy have no social values, this guy pipes. You laid an urge to serve. And the guy smiles with pity in his heart."

"So I figure I'll change the subject. Because that guy not only took my money away from me but he pities me for wanting it back. He feels that if I make an honest dollar, I can't go to heaven. He is like this guy Samson in the Bible. He grabs himself a pair of marble pillars and knocks down the whole works including Samson himself. So he figures he's a hero because he knocked something down. And this bumbino, he's got it in his head that anybody who takes the trouble to build something up is just a selfish, mean, crooked so and so what ain't got no social values."

THE GUY WITH AN URGE
"So I change the subject. I says, 'Mister, I knew a guy once that had an urge. He told me so himself. He had an urge to be an opera singer. But he had a voice like a busted bazooka. And he was stiff like he had housemaid's knee in his whole body. And he acted like a natural born ham that was kosher."

"So I says, 'How can you be an actor in an opera, Jake, if you can't sing and you can't act?' 'You should worry,' he answers. 'I got an urge.'"

"How do you know you got this urge, Jake?" I asked.

"I know it because I got it," Jake answered. "In the morning when I go in the bathroom, do I think of customers? he asks. 'Do I think of politics, the rent, the money I owe?' 'Do I think of what I'll do for a living?' 'No,' he says, 'these things never come to my head. But music, that comes. I open my mouth and out flows music. Such music, you never heard, and the wonderful thing about it is, I can't read a note. It's an urge. I tell you Sam. It's an urge.'"

"So I look at this guy and I wonder is he dopey or am I being pink elephants. So I say, 'Jake, if you can't read a note how can you sing opera?' So he answers, 'They'll teach me.' So I asks, 'Who is the teacher?' So he answers, 'The WPA.'"

"If you got an urge, they give you lessons and money. You get money because you take lessons and you take lessons because you got an urge."

6 GEORGIANS KILLED AS CAR HITS TRUCK IN SOUTH CAROLINA

TAYLORS, S. C., Feb. 18.—(AP) An automobile in collision with the rear end of a truck near here just before dawn today carried six of its eight passengers to death and critically injured the others. The two occupants of the truck were not hurt.

Thomas McAfee, Greenville undertaker, tentatively identified the dead as:

Charles Johnson, 30; Robert Johnson, 25, and his wife, 22; Miss Frankie Johnson, 19; Mrs. Laura Reese, 35, and daughter, Alva Jean Reese, 11, all of Oakman, Ga.

The injured were named at a Greenville hospital as James Davis, 30, of Rome, Ga., and Leonard Reese, 12, of Oakman. Both were reported semiconscious.

Deputy Sheriff R. H. Bearden, of Greenville county, said Floyd Eugene Miller, 27, of Claremont, N. C., was the driver of the truck, which he said was owned by the Akers Motor Line, of Gastonia. N. C. Bearden said the truck had just begun to move after stopping on the side of the highway, when he said the automobile ploughed under it from the rear. Bearden named the other occupant of the truck as Murrell Dean, 20, of Claremont. He said both were detained, pending an investigation.

McAfee said Davis told him Mrs. Reese had hired him to drive from Oakman, about 30 miles from Rome, to her parents' home, near Charlotte. He said he understood all the passengers were related.

Both vehicles were headed north on the Greenville-Spartanburg highway, he said, when the crash occurred at the intersection of the recently constructed dual lane road and the old highway.

ONE KILLED, SIX HURT IN HEAD-ON COLLISION

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

HOMER, Ga., Feb. 18.—One man was killed and five others and a young woman were injured early tonight in a head-on collision on the highway about five miles north of here.

Five of the victims, listed as Joe Bagwell, Howard Pool, Quillian Murray and J. B. Eller Jr., all CCC enrollees; Branson Dalton, and Miss Jessie Pressley, were taken to a hospital in Commerce.

The last two named were reported in serious condition. Dalton was said to have received fractures of both legs.

The sixth victim, J. M. Garrison, father-in-law of Dalton, was taken to a Gainesville hospital, also in serious condition. The extent of his injuries was not immediately ascertained.

Sartain and the other CCC boys were en route to their homes in this section for the week end. They are enrolled in a camp at Lakemont.

Garrison, Dalton and Miss Pressley were riding northward, toward Cornelia when the collision occurred, on what investigating officers said was a comparatively open stretch of road.

'TRUTH' DEMANDED ON U. S. POLICY

'What Does It Mean?' Asks Hearst, on Radio.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—(UP) William Randolph Hearst in a radio address tonight called on the administration to "reflect the truth, all the truth and nothing but the truth" about its foreign policies.

The publisher, whose speech was broadcast on a nation-wide hook-up, asserted that utterances by President Roosevelt and Secretary of State Cordell Hull required "definition and elucidation."

"Does the attitude of the administration," he asked, "reflect any genuine danger to American rights or liberties or principles or property, or does it merely indicate a desire, or perhaps an agreement, to protect British and French and Russian interests in Europe or in the Orient?"

Rome's New Flood Control System Holds Back High Waters on River Front

Rome's North Second avenue once looked like this during flood periods. Seen from the Second avenue bridge across the Oostanaula river, flood waters stretched several blocks westward. Part of the new two-mile levee system now extends along the avenue under the railway trestle at left.

Kibitzers always are present where public construction is under way. Here they swarm along the railing of Rome's Fifth avenue bridge, watching a dragne doing a little smoothing-up work at the point where the levee meets the flood wall at the bridge, looking northward.

FIRST CARGO VESSEL REACHES COLUMBUS

Towboat Arrives Ahead of Revised Schedule on Initial Run.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 18.—(AP) The riverboat Barbara Hunt, towing a barge loaded with a cargo of 135,000 gallons of gasoline consigned to a local oil company, docked at the old city wharf here tonight after a voyage up the Apalachicola and Chattahoochee rivers from the Gulf.

Docking the towboat marked the first time in a number of years that a commercial vessel had made a trip from the Gulf to Columbus, and a crowd of several thousand persons cheered her in.

The voyage was the first in regularly scheduled service between Columbus and Gulf ports.

The tow boat was bought several months ago by a local company headed by Royce Kershaw, and comes to the Chattahoochee river service on the Mississippi river. S. C. Cameron is the pilot.

Two other steamers are scheduled to go into service on the Chattahoochee some time in the future. It was announced this week that another company had purchased the vessels. Definite dates for their first trips have not been announced.

The Barbara Hunt originally was scheduled to have arrived this morning, but was delayed. When the delay was announced, it was said she would dock tomorrow morning. However, a shift in the plans was made and she reached Columbus early tonight.

The sixth victim, J. M. Garrison, father-in-law of Dalton, was taken to a Gainesville hospital, also in serious condition. The extent of his injuries was not immediately ascertained.

Sartain and the other CCC boys were en route to their homes in this section for the week end. They are enrolled in a camp at Lakemont.

Colorful Program Mapped by Rome For Levee Celebration Wednesday

Parade, Military Review, Dedication Ceremonies, Fireworks Display and Other Features Expected To Draw Thousands of Visitors.

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

ROME, Ga., Feb. 18.—Numerous civic committees here today labored with last-minute details to make the flood control celebration Wednesday one of the biggest attractions in Rome's history.

The all-day program, including a parade and military review, dedication ceremonies, addresses by distinguished visitors and citizens, and a night fireworks display, is expected to bring thousands of visitors and citizens to Rome from points throughout northwest Georgia. Chairman J. R. Hornady, of the general committee, stated:

Modern war equipment of the United States army will be displayed in the first such review ever to be held here. With the Sixth United States Cavalry taking part, northwest Georgians will be given a view of the latest type motorized fighting equipment, including scout cars, rapid-fire guns and their crews.

Cavalry Display.

Six pieces of the cavalry's equipment are scheduled to arrive in Rome from Fort Oglethorpe by 8 o'clock Wednesday morning, immediately going on display until the parade is formed later. Officers in charge will explain operations of the machines for the public.

The motorized units will be lined up in the parade behind the Sixth Cavalry's band, and after the procession they will again be placed on display for further inspection.

Several fast army airplanes from Fort Benning also are expected to take part in the celebration, along with civilian aircraft. A mass flight over the city and the two-mile levee system is being planned by the Northwest Georgia Flyers' Association, and flyers from Atlanta, Chattanooga and other cities have been invited to participate.

Downing Musgrove, executive secretary, will represent Governor Rivers at the ceremonies, while Mayor J. H. Meighan, of Gadsden, member of the Governor's staff, will represent Governor Frank M. Dixon, of Alabama.

A spectacular fireworks display on the levee system Wednesday night will bring the day's program to a close.

They should be still in school. They can't get the things which mean development for them and for their capacities, so I think we should go that step further today, with our added knowledge about education and that the federal government should, as far as the congress thinks it possible, aid in equalizing these opportunities and making them greater along more modern lines."

Seminary Girls Pick Alabaman 'Junior Queen'

Miss Connie Beeland, of Greenville, Ala., was declared elected queen of the annual junior class carnival last night at Washington Seminary. Votes were cast by the student body at a cent apiece, with each girl candidate having her own manager. Balloting was held all week at the school. Votes were counted 15 minutes before the coronation, which took place amid a carnival atmosphere.

Candidates for the queen were Claire Johnson, Ione Mercer, Catherine Tift and Connie Beeland. Sideshows, a fashion show and a variety program featured the affair.

2 HURT, 5 HELD IN GUILD CLASH

Chicago Strikers Accuse Newspaper 'Sluggers.'

CHICAGO, Feb. 18.—(UP)—Two men were taken to a hospital today and five others were arrested as the result of an outbreak of violence across the street from the plant of the Chicago American and the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

The American Newspaper Guild, which called a strike against the Hearst papers on December 5, charged that sluggers attacked approximately 100 strikers and sympathizers who were massed across the street because of a court order limiting pickets at the plant to two.

"A disturbance broke out among people gathered across the street from the plant and police took into custody the disturbers of the peace," Police Chief John

Miss Mary Will Holland, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Holland, became the bride of John Franklin Guest, of Spartanburg, S. C., yesterday at 5 o'clock. Harold Shield officiated and Miss Virginia Morris, soloist, played the wedding music during the ceremony, accompanying Miss Frances Gatehouse, soloist. The ushers were John Parker, Richard Wilson, L. C. Mitchum and Jimmie Bell. The bride's aunt, Mrs. Sarah Mosteller, was her only attendant, and was attractive in a model of heavenly blue crepe. 'Interior Decoration' Featured in Ellijay.

Ellijay Woman's Club met recently at the club house with the president, Mrs. R. W. Smith, in the chair, and Mesdames Manley Cox and Herman Westmoreland hostesses.

A good assemblage of club women attended this meeting, which was of special interest to home makers, the subject for the month being "Interior Decoration." Mrs. R. W. Smith was in charge of the program and it was due to her foresight that the guest speaker was Dorothy Foster, who gave a most interesting lecture.

Her talk was amplified with the use of different materials in harmonizing tones showing how to obtain the desired result with a minimum of efforts. She stressed the facts that one's home should express one's personality and told to bring out interesting phases along this line.

During the business session a report was given from the party sponsored by the club for the infantile paralysis foundation with net proceeds of $100.30. Mrs. Joel Stenbridge gave the picture of the month which was "Washington and Lafayette at Mount Vernon," by Thomas Pritchard Bossier, an American painter of the 19th century. Hostesses were assisted by Mesdames Dow Hamrick and Hayden Hampton.

Mrs. Leon L. Meaders, of LaGrange, hospitality chairman for the state meeting of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, to be held in LaGrange March 22 to 25. Reservations for the convention should be made through Mrs. Meaders either at the Colonial hotel or at the Woman's College, where business sessions will be held. Mrs. Meaders is working with the president of the hostess club, Mrs. Jarrell Dunson, and her committees, to give the visitors to LaGrange a royal welcome. Many social features are being arranged, the patriotic societies and the men's civic bodies to have a part in the entertainments.

'Georgia' Is Subject Of Meeting Held At Covington Club

"Georgia" was the interesting topic presented at the February meeting of Covington Woman's Club. Mrs. W. E. Thornley, the chairman, presented Lee Harwell, professor at Emory-at-Oxford, who lectured on "The States' Constitution," tracing the history and development from the original charter down to the 10th constitution, under which our present-day government is operating.

"Georgia's constitution has become inadequate, cumbersome and out-of-date so far as meeting Georgia's present needs," stated Professor Harwell in observation of Georgia Day. In pointing out some of the reasons for the inadequacy was the fact of so many amendments have been added it was hard to recognize the constitution itself.

During the business session, with Mrs. R. M. Mobley, president, presiding, members voted to send donation to student aid fund and Tallulah Falls school. Mrs. Mobley called attention to the passing of Mrs. Judd, of Dalton, whose work is outstanding among American women; also of the death of Nina Hornday, who did a great part in having the legislature name February 12 as "Georgia Day." Mrs. John Birchmore, Mrs. C. W. Johnson, Miss Winnie Hunsion, Miss Brownie Hunsion and Miss Rehears were elected membership to the club.

Motion was made and carried that the Woman's Club co-operate with Mrs. A. Belmont Dennis, state director of Children of Confederacy and the local chapter of Daughters of the Confederacy, in extending an invitation to the Confederate veterans to hold their annual reunion in Covington, and to assist in entertaining them.

LaGrange Club Completes Plans For State Convention in March

Mrs. Albert Hill, of Greenville, president of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. John Jenkins, of Athens, federation vice president and chairman of the program committee, and officers of the LaGrange Woman's Club met in LaGrange Wednesday and completed plans for the State Council of Women's Clubs to be held in LaGrange March 22-25, when Mrs. Sadie Orr Dunbar, general federation president, and other distinguished club leaders will be guests of the local club.

Mrs. Jarrell R. Dunson, president of the LaGrange unit, will serve as general chairman, with Mrs. Leon Meaders and Mrs. Wilbur Freeman, past presidents, serving as co-chairmen. Working committee chairmen appointed from the local club are as follows: To meet distinguished guests, Mrs.

Clifford L. Smith; finance, Mrs. Mary Jane Crayton; registration, Mrs. Tom Hutchinson; hospitality, Mrs. Leon Meaders; entertainment, Mrs. Wilbur Freeman; transportation, Mrs. R. S. O'Neil; arrangements, Miss Tommie Martin; decorations, Mrs. Forrest Truitt; flowers, Mrs. Frank Hutchinson; souvenirs, Mrs. James C. Guinn; publicity, Miss Margaret Edmondson; courtesy, Mrs. Henry Reeves; banners and badges, Mrs. Ellis Ivey; tickets, Mrs. R. L. Adams; music, Mrs. Eugene Baker, Miss Isma Swain; accompanists, Mrs. A. H. Thompson, Mrs. Robert McTigue.

Section chairmen have been named district hostesses, the group including Mrs. T. L. Kinney, Mrs. R. O. Lee, Mrs. Mary Jane Crayton, Mrs. C. L. Smith, Mrs. Ralph Reeves, Miss Isma Swain, and Mrs. F. H. Bessielee.

Indicative of the interest of Georgia clubwomen in the campaign being waged to save Wesleyan, the oldest chartered woman's college in the world, the executive board of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs in session in Atlanta, February 10, 1939, expressed through a resolution in endorsement of the campaign to relieve the financial difficulties and recognized the loss Georgia and the south would suffer if the college is not repurchased.

Mrs. Albert M. Hill, president of Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs, was one of the honored guests at the anniversary luncheon given Friday in celebration of the fifteenth birthday of the club. The president, Mrs. C. O. Duval, presided and special guests included the past presidents of the club, Mrs. John D. Evans, president of the fifth district, and Mrs. Harvie Jordan, executive secretary of the federation.

Mrs. H. B. Ritchie, of Athens, recording secretary of General Federation of Women's Clubs, was the guest speaker on the annual banquet program of the Georgia Power Woman's Club. Mrs. Ritchie used the topic "The Idea of Club Woman." One hundred and twenty-five members and guests enjoyed the occasion. Mrs. Carl Dietrich represented the fifth district and Mrs. J. R. Little the Atlanta Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. E. T. Stallings, president of the club, presided.

Important things to keep in mind about press notices: Quality is more important than quantity. Accuracy is more important than adjectives. Purposes are more important than platitudes. Earnestness is more important than elegance. More important than eloquence. Practice writing news stories, and by the dignity and clarity of your reports, convince the public that your club is a vital element in community progress.

Mrs. Emma Fox, of DeKalb, Mich., honorary vice president of General Federation of Women's Clubs, attended the recent meeting of the board of directors in Washington, D. C. Mrs. Fox's book, "Parliamentary Usage," governs the sessions of 19 national women's organizations, including the General Federation. Mrs. Fox recently celebrated her ninety-first birthday.

Jordan congratulated the club upon its splendid increase in membership during the past year, the enrollment having been doubled. Smyrna became a chartered club in 1925, federated with the state and Cobb county federations in 1926, but withdrew temporarily from the state federation during the period of purchasing the clubhouse. Last year the club reentered and with all indebtedness met on the club home, progress is assured. Hostesses were Mesdames Henry Carson, Eugene Duncan and Bob Hasty.

The club has participated in the nine major departments of the federation: American home, American citizenship, education, fine arts, juniors, legislation, international relations, public welfare, press and publicity. The club completed its quota to the Ella F. White endowment, this being the district project as well as the main objective of the Georgia federation.

The subject of study for half of the year was "The Romance of a Dinner" and for the second half, "Islands of the Sea." The Students' Club year runs from February to February, while the state year runs from April to April. Mrs. James W. Callaway gave an interesting report of the Columbus federation meet in January, which featured American home, with Mrs. Frank Gaines as chairman.

Smyrna Clubwomen Hear Mrs. Jordan. "Federation was the topic for the program of Smyrna Woman's Club at the February meeting and Mrs. Harvie Jordan, of Atlanta, was guest speaker. Mrs. Jordan made an informative talk on the machinery of the general and state federations, and explained the federation foundations.

Reprints of four issues of the club page sent out in folder form to the General Federation officers and chairmen, and to the state presidents, are acknowledged frequently with real appreciation. To the editors has come the following from Mrs. Carl L. Schrader, chairman of fine arts, Boston, Mass.: "Thank you for the space given the department of fine arts in your grand newspaper display of club activities. I appreciate seeing the pages very much. Congratulations, on its material and makeup."

Columbus City Federation of Women's Clubs entertained recently at luncheon honoring Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, former American minister to Denmark who was guest of the Business and Professional Women's Club for a lecture. Mrs. Rohde—pronounced Ro-da—spoke informally at the luncheon telling of her presentation to the King of Denmark, and the incidents of her stay in Denmark and Greenland. She was introduced by Mrs. John Murray, president of the City Federation. At a recent meeting of the Orpheus Club of Columbus, baby member of the City Federation, Mrs. Garnet Shackelford Jr. was elected president to succeed Mrs. Firth Lockwood who has made the club a splendid leader for the past two years. Five new members are Mesdames Tom Fowler, G. E. Singleton, James Newsome, Harris Gardiner and Cliff McLendon.

Macon children were presented recently in a varied program of skits, songs and dances at the annual "kiddie revue" sponsored by the Macon Woman's Club. Proceeds will go to the fund for repurchase of properties of Wesleyan College.

Mrs. Mary Jane Crayton was hostess at luncheon in her home honoring Mrs. John K. Ottley, of Atlanta, who was in LaGrange to speak at the general meeting of the LaGrange Woman's Club, and Mrs. Paul Seale, feature writer, who accompanied Mrs. Ottley to the city for the club meeting and tea at which the members of the junior section entertained following the program. Other guests of Mrs. Crayton were Mrs. Jarrell Dunson, president of the local club; Mrs. Clifford Smith and Mrs. Ethel Dallas Hill.

A real Hollywood premiere of 1939 was sponsored by the Vidalia Woman's Club recently, directed by Robert H. Gage and Robert R. Stevens. This new type of entertainment, with special floodlights, cameras, news reporters and the enthralling melange of color that always makes history in Hollywood. Doubles for the cinema stars chosen from the local people welcomed the crowd on the outside of the theater and took part in the gala stage show.

The one-hundredth annual meeting of Georgia Historical Society will be held in the meeting room of the home of the society, 1030 N. W. Peachtree street, on February 21. The centennial celebration of the Society will be held on May 24th next.

Miss Kelley Weds Oliver T. Duckett. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kelley announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Jessie Louise Kelley, to Oliver T. Duckett, of Atlanta and Miami, son of Mr. and Mrs. Morgan Duckett.

The ceremony took place February 6 at Jackson Hill Baptist church, with Dr. A. T. Allen officiating before a small group of friends and relatives. The sister and brother-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Kimble Jr., were the only attendants.

Mrs. Duckett is a graduate of Girls' High school and also attended Sullins College and a local business school. Mr. Duckett is a graduate of Tech High school. After a wedding trip through Florida and Cuba, Mr. Duckett and his bride will reside in Miami, Florida.

State Federation Library Chairman Issues Greetings to Clubwomen

By MRS. J. W. MOBLEY, of Pelham, Chairman of Division of Library Service for Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

Greetings, Georgia Clubwomen! Library Day for February 22, 1939 should be a very happy one for every federated club in Georgia, with so many interesting things happening just now. First in importance is the federal aid bill for education including rural libraries, introduced in congress in January by Honorable W. H. Larrabee, chairman of the house committee on education, to which committee the bill has been referred. It is H. R. 3517. A similar measure is before the senate committee on education and labor.

I am asking every federated club to pass a resolution at the next meeting endorsing this bill and send copies of the resolution to your congressman and senator, and to Miss Beverly Wheatcroft, Georgia Library Commission, in the state capital in Atlanta.

Notable progress has been made in the past year in local library development through the statewide WPA library project, now comprising 221 units operating in 124 counties in the state. Club women have played an important part in making the library demonstrations successful. They act as sponsors for projects, share their club houses and book collections and raise funds for the purchase of new books. I congratulate every club taking part in a library project and we want this fine work to continue until every county not only has its library but also a book truck, by means of which books are carried to every part of the county and people living in the most remote sections have books to read, often delivered at the book or at a nearby community center.

Let's lower literacy in Georgia, first by teaching people how to read and then by keeping them constantly supplied with plenty of suitable books through our public libraries. Then they will not lose the art of reading, as has happened in the past, through lack of practice.

Our third activity for the year is building up materials bureaus in co-operation with our school teachers; collecting and arranging materials of all kinds useful in enriching the curriculum and placing these in school or public libraries. May your Library Day program be developed around these subjects, centering interest in your local public library and including plans for the improvement and expansion of its services.

Augusta Clubwomen Hear Playlet On 'Home-Coming' at Tallulah

Orchids to Mrs. W. Edward Clark, of Augusta, for a clever and agreeable presentation recently at a luncheon meeting of Augusta Woman's Club. The novel playlet depicted a make-believe "home-coming day" at Tallulah Falls school and so unique was the presentation that Mrs. I. R. Clark, club president, declared that the program had made club members feel very close to the school.

Mrs. W. J. Hollingsworth, impersonating Mrs. Z. I. Fitzpatrick, house mother at the school, presided at the speaking table and guided the part of "the Duchess." Mrs. Clark as the imaginary "Miss Mary," matron at Tallulah, directed the feature. Members on Mrs. Clark's committee taking part as returning alumni of the school were Mesdames Robert Hunt, W. T. Edmonds, Robert Lee Sumner, John Moore, W. H. Jones, Paul Thompson, Dan J. O'Connor, Misses Melba Sparks and Mildred Marston.

Each former student gave an account of herself, or herself, before entering Tallulah and told of accomplishments since graduation. These talks were authentic facts based on information furnished by Mrs. Fitzpatrick and Mrs. John K. Ottley, president of the Tallulah board of trustees. Margie Jones, as "Manda O'Shields," sang "I'm a Mother's Girl" and sang in the woods one day and got her in the school at Tallulah, sang mountain folk songs, and two slender young matrons portrayed fine young graduates who are succeeding in their government positions.

The success of the program exceeded expectations and brought forth such exclamations as, "I had no idea Tallulah had turned out such students!" "From now on I shall work harder than ever for Tallulah!" "I was to lend my car to form the motorcade to our school," etc. The occasion being on "Camellia Day," Sallie Peelle Thompson as "Little Miss Camellia" went about selling the club's camellia seals, which Mrs. A. B. Von Camellia, the club's financial genius, states, added $7.25 to the growing treasury fund. The club is completing its $2,000 perpetual scholarship at Tallulah. Mrs. Edward Clark is chairman of the division of Tallulah Falls School, which comes under the department of education, Mrs. A. B. Von Kamp, chairman.

Decorations were camellias and the speakers' table was centered with an artistic miniature of Tallulah Falls School. Places were marked with woodcuts of "the stile" made by students at Tallulah. On the decorating committee were: Mrs. R. H. Daniel, chairman; Mesdames Glover Bailey, Dewey Johnson and George Schley. Mrs. W. H. H. Jones sang two vocal numbers, with Miss Marston at the piano. Members participating on the program sang the Tallulah alma mater song, written by Dr. W. Edward Clark.

Rev. C. H. Allen Speaks At Acworth Club.

Rev. Charles L. Allen, pastor of Acworth Methodist church, spoke at a recent meeting of the Acworth Carrie Dyer Reading Club, held at the clubhouse. He talked of mountain folk and their customs. Mrs. Fred Kienel is club president and Mrs. W. L. Bennett was program chairman.

The main project for this year is the new library room building. The ways and means chairman and committee sponsored a number of money-making movements during 1938-39, the proceeds going to the building fund.

The club and Acworth library are co-operating with the Acworth public forums which are held monthly. Books on the evening subjects are secured for those desiring further study of the subject, through the Acworth library. Acworth library was recently awarded a book prize by the Georgia Library Commission, of which Miss Beverly Wheatcroft is secretary, for outstanding achievements during the book exhibit of children's best books, which was on display in November. Some 47 certificates were awarded Vacation Reading Club members in September.

Smyrna Clubwomen Hear Mrs. Jordan.

"Federation was the topic for the program of Smyrna Woman's Club at the February meeting and Mrs. Harvie Jordan, of Atlanta, was guest speaker. Mrs. Jordan made an informative talk on the machinery of the general and state federations, and explained the federation foundations.

Mrs. W. A. Quarles, the president, presided at the business session and heard reports from the vice president, Mrs. D. J. Ray; recording secretary and treasurer, Mrs. Robert Motter. Mrs. Callie Jay, efficient librarian, brought report of the library which is sponsored by the club and is steadily growing in number of books and readers.

Mesdames John Bush, Robert Motter and H. A. Heard composed the program committee and Mrs. Bush introduced the speaker. Mrs.

DENY INJUNCTION ON STEINER LEASE

Judge Moore Rules That Proposed Contract Will Be of 'Public Convenience.'

Predicating his ruling on "general public convenience," Judge Virlyn B. Moore, of Fulton county superior court, yesterday refused to enjoin a lease agreement intended to pave the way for erection of a 100-bed, $270,000 addition to the Albert Steiner Cancer Clinic.

Arguments on an injunction to prevent the city from leasing the Steiner properties to Steiner Cancer Hospital, Inc., were heard several weeks ago and the case was taken under advisement. Judge Moore published his decision yesterday and declined to pass on the points of law involved.

Dr. C. C. Aiken, former president of the Fulton County Medical Society, who, along with about 20 other leading doctors, attacked the proposed lease, yesterday indicated that the decision will be appealed to the higher state courts "to prevent a miscarriage of justice."

Hirsch Is Silent.
Joseph H. Hirsch, of the Steiner trustees, declined to make any statement. Councilman John A. White, chairman of council's hospitals committee, said there would be no move pending completion of the litigation. Dr. R. H. Fike, superintendent of Steiner, had no comment for publication.

In the meantime, there appeared little likelihood that any immediate effort will be made to revive the Steiner project. Federal agencies previously turned the undertaking down and there has been no perceptible change in the attitude of federal authorities since that time, it was said last night.

The lease was intended to convey the property to the corporation to facilitate a federal loan to be amortized over a period of about 35 years to construct the addition. Doctors attacked the proposal on the ground that the municipality had no right to estrange public properties in such a manner and further contended that the addition contemplates the treatment of pay patients, a situation they held to be in violation of the provisions of the will of the late Albert Steiner.

"Legal Difficulties."
"The legal questions involved... are not without their difficulties," Judge Moore said in his decision. "Whether the city council has a right to enter into the proposed contract with the Steiner Cancer Hospital, Inc., is a doubtful question."

"However equity seeks, whenever possible, to do the most good to the greatest number, and injunctions should be granted or refused according to the peculiar circumstances of the particular case."

"The court is of the opinion that the proposed contract is advantageous to the public in general, and the conveniences in its favor greatly outweigh the inconveniences."

Following that, Judge Moore dissolved his temporary injunction and refused the permanent injunction sought by the doctors.

"I think we will appeal the case," Dr. Aiken said. "We, of course, have not yet read the decision, but from what we know of it, the legal questions involved are still unsettled. These, we believe, to be of paramount importance. We shall confer with our attorneys along this line."

Mrs. Ralph Butler Makes Address At Macon Woman's Club Meet

Mrs. Ralph Butler, of Dallas, director for Georgia in General Federation of Women's Clubs, spoke on "Need for Spiritual Strength" at the recent meeting of the Macon Woman's Club held in Christ church parish. She was introduced by Mrs. Lewis I. Wexelbaum, chairman of Tallulah Falls school foundation for the club.

"What does democracy mean to clubwomen?" queried Mrs. Butler. Honesty, courage and willingness, to assume responsibility are democratic qualities which bring a sense of personal achievement as their own reward. Aren't southern women responsible to some extent for the fact that the south is sometimes referred to as Economic Problem No. 1?"

Mrs. Butler said as she referred to the sordid picture of our land that some northern people have after reading books like "Tobacco Road," "Are we content to rest on our romantic laurels of moonlight and magnolias? Can't we do something to alter the adverse conditions which in all fairness do merit some criticism?"

Mrs. Butler urged clubwomen to face facts, and urged them to stamp out unjust propaganda. "In this country we do have the privilege of free speech, and how thankful we should be when we consider that this is not the case in many foreign countries." She told of attending a general federation board meeting in Washington, where representatives of foreign clubs were exceedingly wary of a bold expression of their views.

Mrs. Butler stressed the need

Tour of Thomasville Gardens To Open Pilgrimage March 22

Thomasville, the city of roses, will open the third annual pilgrimage of Georgia homes and gardens of the Garden Club of Georgia on Wednesday, March 22. An outstanding tour of the magnificent homes and estates of the city has been arranged by Mrs. Robb Pardee and Mrs. N. H. Jeffries of the Thomasville Garden Club. It will include "Greenwood," the estate of Mrs. Payne Whitney of New York; "Pebble Hill," Miss Pansy Ireland, of Cleveland; "Millpond," the Wade family, of Cleveland; "Melrose," Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Hanna, of Cleveland; "Winnstead," Mrs. Coburn Haskell; the home and gardens of the Misses Wright, of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Smith, of Mr. and Mrs. James Gibbs and of Mr. and Mrs. C. K. Ausley.

"Greenwood," which the famed architect Stanford White called a perfect example of Greek revival architecture, was begun in 1835, built of bricks made on the plantation by slaves. "Greenwood" enjoyed a distinction rare in those days—the services of an architect, John Wind, who spent nine years on the place, doing much of the interior carving himself as well as the carving of the huge Cherokee rose which ornaments the facade. A characteristic southern garden, camellias, boxwood, banana shrubs in small beds with carpet planing surrounds the house. Stanford White designed the beautiful formal Italian garden with a fountain and marble figure excavated from the ruins of Pompeii.

"Pebble Hill Plantation" provides a variety of interest for the visitor in its extensive gardens and acres of forest land. The entering drive overlooks a deep sunken garden with ancient wisteria trees and thickets of crape myrtle. The blue garden carries out the color scheme of blue with pines, violets, forget-me-nots and bush wisteria leading to a reflecting pool. In 1934 a fire destroyed the old home except for one wing and a magnificent Greek revival home has been erected on the original site.

"Millpond" has probably the most extensive gardens of any of the plantations around Thomasville. It consists of 12,000 acres, mostly virgin pine, abounding in quail, dove and deer. The garden immediately adjacent to the house is arranged in formal plots in which are camellias of every variety. A clipped pittosporum hedge borders this garden. Most effective is the double arbor of Lady Banksia roses over the posts of which is twined rhynchospermum.

At "Melrose" one of the outstanding features is a white garden—white azaleas, iris, camellias, wisteria against a green background of clipped pittosporum. A pink garden with pink camellias and azaleas with a carpet of violets, a charming walled rose garden to the south of the glass enclosed swimming pool which houses unusual tropical plants are among the many aspects of "Melrose." A unique feature of "Melrose" is "Showboat," the private moving picture theater reached by a real gangplank over an artificial "Mississippi river."

The approach to "Winnstead" is a vista down an avenue with wild

"Birdhaven," home of Mr. and Mrs. James Gibbs, as may be imagined, is owned by a bird lover. Four or five acres of land form the garden set off by a pine thicket where the birds loved by Mr. Gibbs find a welcome home. A magnificent holly tree, camellias and roses feature "Birdhaven."

The home of the Misses Wright is an old one-story Colonial building of great charm and is furnished with fine antiques. Two other interesting homes and gardens complete the program arranged for pilgrimage by the Thomasville Garden Club.

Nine other cities will be included in the 1939 pilgrimage.

They Swore -- They'd Bring 'Em Back To Eat Again

Prisoner at the Fulton Tower Describes Realtors' Visit to Jail

Editor Real Estate:

The boys down here at the jail shore got skeered last Wednesday when they seed a big passel of men comin' into the jail. We knew from the looks of 'em they wasn't comin' down here for no good. In fact, they looked like some fellers we'd seed come in from a raid.

But we soon found out they wuz a lot of dirt dealers comin' down to get somethin' to eat, and we soon found out they wuz about the emptiest but nicest passel of men we'd seed for a long time.

Big Bill Turner, he's the big cheese down here at the jail, and 'cause the county commiss had invited these real estate fellers to come down and get a good square meal onct in their lives, he had coked up a big lot o' grub, and a feller named Fling he flung himself down here and helped Big Bill take care o' the crowd. He made a speech and told 'em any time they wanted a room and cot down here they could get it. They already knowed that, but they wanted to be perlit, and they thanked him just the same.

Cheatin' and Swindlin'.

I am down here for cheatin' and swindlin'—both two meanin' the same—but there's only one charge agin me. I hid around in the lobby, and as them fellers lock-stepped it back from the front office to what we call our dinin' room, I slipped into line and went in and et and mixed around with 'em just like I was a regular real estate feller. No one didn't recognize me, not even Big Bill, and I shore did eat a big meal, though Mister Turner always gives us plenty of good stuff to eat. I ain't sayin' whether I am guilty of cheatin' and swindlin' or not, as I want to go to trial with a perfectly impartial mind, but anyway I felt right smart at home minglin' round with that bunch. I may be guilty, but they'll have to prove it on me. I like to mix round with fellers that know how to sympathize with a feller charged with cheatin' and swindlin'.

Well, anyway, after the eatin' they took two fellers—a feller named Draper and one named Robinson—to the crowd present, but nobody didn't seem to fall over their selves to take 'em. They said it was the first time they had ever saw the inside of a jail. They probably meant the Atlanta jail. But you can take it or leave it. You know how much I depend on you, and I shore did eat a big meal, though Mister Turner always gives us plenty of good stuff to eat. I ain't sayin' whether I am guilty of cheatin' and swindlin' or not, as I want to go to trial with a perfectly impartial mind, but anyway I felt right smart at home minglin' round with that bunch. I may be guilty, but they'll have to prove it on me. I like to mix round with fellers that know how to sympathize with a feller charged with cheatin' and swindlin'.

Makin' Wise Cracks.

Well, anyway, when them fellers stood there behind the big bars the crowd stood round a-laffin and makin' wise cracks. One little feller who looked like he ought to have been behind the bars himself—they called him Hoke Blair—he lowed that them fellers was "two naturals behind the bars, if he ever seed one." Then everybody laffered agin. But you could see they wasn't used to bein' locked up, no in the daytime, anyway. So Jailer Foster and Big Bill fixed up a bond for just about what the commiss would be on the sale of a built-up city block, and they 'phoned a man named Alvin Kates, who handles the chamber at the commerce, and who gives Robinson his check when he earns one, to come down and sign his bond. He did. That left that feller Draper still lookin' through the bars, but they 'phoned to a feller named Hop Owens, whose got more brains and money in a minit than I've got in a week, and he said turn him out. They did.

But gettin' back to the eatin', Mr. Turner he had all kinds of fine barbecue meats and Brunswick stew, and hominy and sausage and taters and hot biscuits and rye bread. Lots of 'em took rye bread. They just liked the name, and it was the nearest thing Turner has at the jail with a name somethin' like it. Then they brought us a half-moon apple pie all sprinkled with sugar and a piece of cheese. Boy, did I eat! I expect Mister Turner would lock me up in close confinement if he knew I had slipped down there and et with those birds.

Two Out-of-Town Fellers. I forgot to say that that feller Draper had two fellers with him, one named Allen and tother one named Gilbert, from Augusta and Savannah, respectfully. They were up here runnin' the business of the Georgia Real Estate commiss, bein' the two members of the clan, with Draper as chairman. He presented 'em to the crowd present, but nobody didn't seem to fall over their selves to take 'em. They said it was the first time they had ever saw the inside of a jail. They probably meant the Atlanta jail. But you can take it or leave it. You know how much I depend on you, and I shore did eat a big meal, though Mister Turner always gives us plenty of good stuff to eat. I ain't sayin' whether I am guilty of cheatin' and swindlin' or not, as I want to go to trial with a perfectly impartial mind, but anyway I felt right smart at home minglin' round with that bunch. I may be guilty, but they'll have to prove it on me. I like to mix round with fellers that know how to sympathize with a feller charged with cheatin' and swindlin'.

Well, after eatin' the big meal Mister Foster and Mister Turner showed all the dirt - dobbars around over the jail gettin' 'em kind o' used to it. I reckon. There was one gal in the crowd. She was real purty and nice, and nuthin' was said by her or by anyone else that didn't sound O. K. She talked to several of the boys in their cells. I almost wished I had stood up in my cell, just so I could have talked to her. But she conducted herself around the jail as proud as a peacock, and I'm hopin' she does somethin'—not very bad—but just enough to get herself locked up while I'm waitin' for my trial. I heard one feller say she was the secretary of the board.

Jail Nice and Clean.

The crowd went to every floor. They saw how clean and fine Mister Turner and us boys keep the jail. They bragged on the woman's section, where Mrs. McCutcheon has charge. It was fine. There liked to have been one accident. A feller named Mack (I think his full name is McKinley). Well, anyway he must o' been full, for up in the negro section he was rubberin' round, got hisself all scattered from the crowd, and got locked up. But he yelled and pounded on the door till the jailer went back and released him, and if he hadn't the Burdett company would have been out a good man.

Well, it was a fine crowd and a fine meal, and nobody never seed people turned out of the jail as full as that crowd was. We guess hope they'll come back agin—soon. I had a big time, and when I am found n't guilty at my trial or have served my term, as the case may be, I think I'll get me a job as a real estate agent.

Your Obedient Serpent, FULLER GRUBB.
County Jail, Feb. 16, 1939.

$10,000 IS SPENT IMPROVING STORE

National Shirt Shops Makes Modern Changes.

Improvements costing $10,000 have been made to the National Shirt Shop at 75 Peachtree street, including modern fronts, complete interior remodeling with air conditioning, and new fixtures. While previously occupying the premises, new lease arrangements through Draper-Owens Company, agents for the property, were negotiated, making possible the improvements. Abe Asher is manager of the Atlanta stores.

CHECK LIST TAKES 'PIG OUT OF POKE'

Standard Forms Showing Every Material and Detail Can Be Listed.

To take the "pig out of the poke" and show the home buyer exactly what he is getting in his new home, a method has now been developed to give the consumer a protection never before available on a national scale. Developed by Johns-Manville after consultation with Federal Housing standard-form "check list" that shows every material going into a home and how each material is to be used.

The Guildway form, "Specifications for Residential Construction," as it is called, lists nearly 300 items in the construction of a home upon which the buyer and the contractor agree in advance. The list includes even the kind of wood to be used in the handrail in the stairs, the weight of the copper in the roof leaders, and the cement mix and thickness of foundation walls. When the document is filled out, the buyer has a minutely described "house on paper" which the contractor then can and must copy exactly.

The primary purpose of the Guildway form specification, as explained by A. A. Hood, Johns-Manville official and director of the National Housing Guild, is to avoid possible misunderstanding between the home buyer and the builder. Another purpose is to meet the needs of lending institutions and the FHA for a standard specification form, giving complete information on the home to be financed, as under the FHA system the lending agency must know exactly what will go into a home and how it will be built. Too often in the past, Mr. Hood states, great inconvenience to the buyer has been caused by builders neglecting to supply full information and building has been delayed or even prevented.

The new specification form will be made available immediately, according to Mr. Hood, through local housing guilds. These guilds, organized in hundreds of communities, are co-operative groups composed of local financing institutions, architects, contractors, sub-contractors and other individuals and firms interested in better building. Each guild has its headquarters at the office of the building material dealer in the particular community.

NATIONAL REALTY WITH $40,000 SALES

January and February Have Produced Good Sales, Says Sturgess.

The closing of 12 sales of residential properties aggregating about $40,000 through the offices of National Realty Management Company, Inc., during the past week is evidence of the continuance of increased activity in the realty field, which started at the beginning of the year.

"January and February are usually rather quiet months," stated A. H. Sturgess, district manager, "but this year these two months have produced an exceptionally large volume of business. This is a strong indication that the spring season will see more activity than we have had for several years."

The properties sold by National Realty Management Company, Inc., all belonged to National Bondholders Corporation, and the various transactions were handled by Tom Faison, Carlos Lynes, R. A. Macon, Mack Matthews, C. E. West and F. R. Wing.

1939 SHOULD PROVE GREATEST BUILDING YEAR IN A DECADE

Federal Authority Predicts New Homes Will Go Up at Rapid Rate.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Feb. 18. Predictions that 1939 should prove the most active home-building year in a decade find striking corroboration in figures on the Federal Housing Administration's home loan insurance operations, Administrator Stewart McDonald said today.

Applications for small home mortgage insurance have increased each week since the year-end holidays, Mr. McDonald pointed out, rising from $13,400,000 in the first week of the year to $21,700,000 in the week ended February 11.

This volume of mortgages selected for appraisal in the year's sixth week compared favorably with the high levels reached in the most active weeks last spring and summer when these applications were averaging between $22,000,000 and $23,000,000. The figure was 145 per cent above the corresponding week a year ago.

"Even more remarkable than this sharp rise in winter months is the fact that a steadily increasing proportion of applications represent new homes to be constructed under FHA inspection," Mr. McDonald said.

"About 63 per cent of the mortgages in the last weekly figure were homes to be constructed, whereas our average a year ago was only about 30 per cent."

"Furthermore, between 1,500 and 1,750 new homes have been started each week this year on the basis of mortgage insurance commitments previously issued. This is a remarkable total for the winter season and seems to forecast unusual later activity."

"Our figures on mortgages selected for appraisal have consistently proved to be an early barometer of home-building activity. Various checks, throughout the entire period of the FHA's operations, have borne out these trends with significant regularity."

A year ago our figures were also rising, although they started from a low base. The national housing act was amended and liberalized on February 3, 1938, and the effect of these amendments began to appear late that month. By the middle of March the weekly total of mortgage insurance applications had crossed the $20,000,000 mark, and it remained there consistently until the last part of the year."

Superintendent's Message

By dear Boys and Girls:

Each of you must learn that you have a great deal to do with your own education. It is one of my fundamental beliefs that we must realize that we have much to do with our own training and that we should have a part in our own education. I think this applies to the kindergarten just as well as the senior high school.

I want each of you to know that the playground, the back yard, the movie, the radio, the newspaper, the church, the Sunday school, and all the activities in which you are engaged, are a part of your education; that in these you must make the right kind of choice. You must use the right language; you must do your best to play fairly whatever games you are playing; to act sincerely with family and your friends; to read the things that are best; to work with your church, and your Sunday school, because in doing all of this you are surely educating yourself while you are attending school.

A great man in a great book said that the development of personalities depend on our acquiring and practicing a set of habits which have as their object the serving of others.

Let each of us try to develop those habits in our lives that would be of service first of all to our mothers, fathers, sisters and brothers and the people in our own household, and then develop a set of habits that will serve our church and our friends. If we acquire such a set of habits it will show in our faces; it will make up our personalities, and that is what each of us desires to become.

Always your friend,
WILLIS A. SUTTON,
Superintendent of Schools.

Miss Turner, Mr. Smith Are Wed At Brilliant LaGrange Ceremony

LAGRANGE, Ga., Feb. 18.—Brilliance and beauty characterized the service that united in marriage Miss Meredith Sterling Turner, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Henry Turner Jr., and Henry Carson Smith Jr., of Savannah, formerly of Lawrenceville. The ceremony took place this evening at 8 o'clock at the First Methodist church, Rev. M. M. Maxwell reading the marriage service in the presence of a fashionable assemblage of friends and relatives.

Stately palms banked the chancel of the church, forming the background for the bridal tableau, and white standards holding white gladioli decorated the altar which was flanked with seven-branched candelabra holding cathedral candles. Preceding and during the ceremony Mrs. Arthur H. Thompson, of LaGrange, organist, presented a musical program.

Mrs. Cyrus Kump, of Elkins, W. Va., and Miss Martha Turner, of LaGrange, sisters of the bride, served as matron and maid of honor. They were gowned alike in period dresses of yellow net fashioned over yellow taffeta, featuring a trim of yellow Chantilly lace at the sweetheart neck, the puffed sleeves, and in the bouffant skirts. They carried bouquets of souvenir roses tied with yellow satin ribbons.

Mrs. John White, of Atlanta; Miss Sara Smith, of Lawrenceville, sister of the bridegroom; Miss Louise Batten, of Augusta; Mrs. Phillips Albright, Mrs. Joe Dunson III, Mrs. Kenneth Grace, Misses Mary Traylor, Stella King, Isabelle Badger, and Tudor Trotter, all of LaGrange, were bridesmaids. Their gowns, fashioned like those of the matron and maid, were of ciel blue net posed over blue taffeta, and their bouquets were also of souvenir roses.

Hazel Kump, of Elkins, small niece of the bride, as flower girl, preceded the bride to the altar, wearing a dainty frock of yellow net, and carrying a Colonial nosegay.

Va.; and Joe Dunson III, of LaGrange.

The bride entered with her father who gave her in marriage. She presented a radiant picture in her bridal gown of lustrous white satin fashioned with sweetheart neckline, long, fitted sleeves, and full skirt ending in a long train. The only trim was at the waist which was quired in a rose design, and the bride wore as her only ornament a brooch of baroque pearls centered with a small diamond, her father's gift to his bride, the former Hazel Vorus, of Atlanta. A fitted cap of rosepoint lace was held to her hair with clusters of orange blossoms, and a veil of illusion tulle fell the length of the court train. Her bouquet was of lilies of the valley.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith left by motor for a wedding trip, and after March 1 they will reside in Savannah where the former is connected in business with the Standard Oil Company. The bride chose for traveling a three-piece suit of horizon blue wool, the top coat featuring a trim of red fox. She wore a hat of navy felt, and lizard accessories completed the modish costume. Her flowers were a shoulder spray of bronze orchids.

W.C.T.U. Yearbooks Distributed At Peachtree Road Meeting

By Mrs. Mary Harris Armor, of Atlanta, Editor Georgia D. A. R. The meeting of the Peachtree Road W. C. T. U. at the home of Mrs. W. L. Ballenger was of unusual interest. Mrs. W. L. Bryan had completed the beautiful yearbooks—and a vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Bryan for her artistic work. The yearbook contains the programme for each monthly meeting, and contains names and street and telephone number of each member. A picture of Frances Willard, framed in blue and silver, ornaments the cover. The February program was on legislation. Mrs. A. H. Strickland spoke on petitions to congress now being circulated regarding the advertising of liquor on the radio. She urged more interest in new voters, especially in those just naturalized. She submitted the Georgia Creed, written by herself and endorsed by nine civic and religious organizations, to which was added the endorsement of the Peachtree Road W. C. T. U.

Mrs. A. Lee Hale had charge of the worship period, and the "Precious Jewels of Scripture" collected and strung in memory of Miss Willard, bore the theme of the day—"Legislation." Led by Mrs. W. N. Ainsworth, the union sang "Rainbows of Promise." Mrs. Ainsworth sang "What the World Needs is Jesus." A resolution of thanks was voted Judge Virlyn Moore for his ruling upholding the verdict of the county commissioners with regard to liquor stores in this county. The president, Mrs. J. M. Boland, displayed a list of names signed to the petition against radio advertising of alcoholic liquors, and other names were added. It was urged that letters and petitions for his legislation continue to be sent senators and congressmen.

Mrs. R. H. Black, of Demorest, president of the Ninth District W. C. T. U., was introduced and spoke on "Means and Methods." Led by Mrs. W. N. Ainsworth, the union sang "Rainbows of Promise." Mrs. Ainsworth sang "What the World Needs is Jesus." A resolution of thanks was voted Judge Virlyn Moore for his ruling upholding the verdict of the county commissioners with regard to liquor stores in this county. The president, Mrs. J. M. It was urged that letters and petitions for his legislation continue to be sent senators and congressmen.

Mrs. A. Lee Hale, key woman for the Frances Willard Centenary for Georgia, asks that those who may have papers containing accounts of Frances E. Willard's visits to this city and state, or souvenirs or pictures of the same communicate with her. Mrs. Erin Byrd, headquarters secretary, says: "Dozens and dozens of inspiring birthday cards, postal cards and letters have come to headquarters during February in response to our President's query. 'Do you read the bulletin?' These have greatly warmed the hearts of the workers. The president of the Georgia W. C. T. By Bessie F. Kirven, Chairman Publicity, Garden Club of Georgia.

COLUMBUS, Ga., Feb. 18.—In 1941 the Garden Club of Georgia will commemorate the 50th anniversary of the founding of the first garden club, not only in Georgia, but in America. The movement was begun 50 years ago by the Ladies' Garden Club, of Athens, Ga., and a memorial, in the form of a "Living Garden," is rapidly taking shape to honor this pioneer group in garden club work.

The University of Georgia is making it possible for the Garden Club of Georgia with its 188 clubs, composed of some 6,000 members, to honor the founders of this first garden club. The memorial was discussed at the board meeting of the Garden Club of Georgia, held recently in Savannah, and was heartily endorsed.

Hubert Owens, of the University of Georgia, and who is also a member of the executive board of the Garden Club of Georgia, has submitted plans for the development and upkeep of the garden. These will appear in the March issue of Garden Gateways.

The following statement has been issued by Mrs. W. F. Bradshaw, chairman of Founders' Memorial, Garden Club of Georgia: "The University of Georgia is making possible for the Georgia state garden clubs to honor, most worthily, the founders who gave to Georgia the distinction of having America's first garden club.

"It is a very real heritage to know those Georgians had such an appreciation of the finer things of life and the inspiration to bring them within the reach of all.

"At one of this old club's meetings the invitation was not to the select few, but, as issued by them, 'Let all the ladies of Athens who are interested in the matter of gardening, be present.'

"Now, to the youth of the state, comes the same general offer—'To all interested in the matter of gardening' the University memorial plan offers its instructions and an opportunity for a better understanding of the problems of this profession and better equipment for its great flowering.

"To the state, comes greater development through these young gardeners and instead of being known by such unpleasant notoriety as 'Tobacco Road,' it may attain a happier cause of fame.

"The 'Living Garden' offers the students a visual knowledge of the charm of design and the technical experience for its achievement.

"The Georgia garden clubs have a real opportunity for service to their state, and, it is certain, they will rise splendidly to their responsibility."

Miss Durette To Wed. Mr. Murray Wilkinson-MacManus Marriage Solemnized at Cathedral Rites

Miss Virginia Mackenzie Wilkinson became the bride of Valentine Wayne MacManus, of Stamford, Conn., at a beautiful ceremony performed yesterday at 4:30 o'clock at St. Philip's Cathedral, with Dean Raimundo de Ories officiating.

Tom Brumby, organist, presented a program of nuptial music. The approach to the altar was banked on either side with palms and ferns, and branched candelabra holding burning white tapers were grouped at intervals among the greenery. The brass altar vases were filled with Easter lilies and the pews reserved were marked with clusters of lilies.

Serving as ushers were Daniel Donovan, of Long Island, N. Y.; Thomas A. Seals, Doyle Hall and Harold Ballenger.

The bride chose for her attendants Miss Edith Abrams as maid of honor, and as bridesmaids Mesdames Harry Mozen, of Charlotte, N. C.; Whit Durden, of Douglas, Ga.; Doyle Hall and Thomas Seals.

Miss Abrams' gown was fashioned of turquoise chiffon posed over matching taffeta. The bodice was made with a shirred waist line, puffed sleeves and V-neck. The maid of honor carried a bouquet of snapdragons in cyclamen tones.

The bridesmaids wore cyclamen chiffon gowns over matching taffeta, made similar to that worn by the maid of honor. They carried bouquets of yellow snapdragons.

All of the attendants wore rhinestone clips at the necks of their gowns, which were gifts from the bride. Their circular face veils were caught to their hair with tiny clusters of matching snapdragons.

The lovely young bride was given away by her cousin John Weems, and they were met at the altar by the groom and Martin Oberlander, of Brooklyn, N. Y., who acted as best man.

The bridal gown was fashioned of white chantilly lace over slipper satin and was made on princess lines with a Queen Anne collar and square neckline. The long sleeves fitted snugly at the wrist and the skirt flared into a fan-shaped train.

The bride's veil of illusion tulle was caught to her hair with a cascade of chantilly lace and clusters of orange blossoms on either side. She carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses and valley lilies.

Following the ceremony Miss Inez Wilkinson, aunt of the bride, entertained at a reception in the silver room at the Biltmore hotel. The guests included the bridal party, relatives, out-of-town guests and close friends.

The bride's table was centered with a wedding cake embossed in white and green and surrounded by white swans and white sweet peas. Crystal candelabra held white burning tapers and white snapdragons were used in artistic arrangement throughout the room.

Mr. MacManus and his bride left for a wedding trip. For traveling Mrs. MacManus chose a suit, fur-trimmed, with a matching hat of felt and black accessories.

Little Miss Margaret and Candler Baxley, nieces of the groom, and daughters of Dr. and Mrs. W. Baxley, of Porterdale, were the flower girls. Their frocks were pink, featuring full skirts and puffed sleeves.

The lovely bride entered with her father, F. P. Holder, by whom she was given in marriage, and was met at the altar by the groom and his brother, Dr. W. W. Baxley, of Porterdale, who was best man. She wore a gown of white satin, fashioned along princess lines, with a high neck and long, tight sleeves. The gored skirt was extremely full, and extended to form a fan-shaped train. A fingertip veil of illusion tulle was caught to her hair with a cascade of orange blossoms. She carried a bridal bouquet of roses and valley lilies.

After the ceremony, Mr. and Mrs. F. P. Holder entertained at a reception at their home on Martin street.

Mrs. Holder wore a model of blue lace and a navy straw hat trimmed in fuchsia roses. Mr. and Mrs. Holder, Mr. and Mrs. Baxley and the bridesmaids formed the receiving line. About 200 guests were present.

American Legion Auxiliary Units Plan National Defense Programs

By MRS. DAN H. DAVIS,
State Publicity Director,
American Legion Auxiliary.

I hope that you are going to have a defense program in your unit this month. Make your program short, interesting and stimulating. Choose your speaker carefully, a poor speaker can ruin any program. He should know his subject, speak convincingly and in a pleasing manner.

This question of national security should be a personal matter with each one of us, and it will be if only we realize that it has a direct effect, not only upon our country, but upon our homes, our children and our future; for after all it is your husband and mine, and your brother and mine, who are still eligible for war service. It is your son and my son who is school, with Mrs. Underwood, regent, in charge.

At the suggestion of Mrs. F. E. Dorch it was voted to contribute to the school lunch room for undernourished children. It was also voted to send to Ellis Island an extra box, besides the usual one, containing the usual literature to the American Merchant Marine library. The program included a song, a paper, "Dueling and Its Origin," by Miss Emma Caldwell, and a reading, "Genealogy in Holy Writ," by Miss Maud Jelks. Mrs. D. P. McGriff was in charge. Mrs. D. E. Duggan was elected delegate to the continental congress in Washington, and Mrs. Richard Smith as delegate to the state conference in Atlanta.

fast approaching the age when he could be called for service.

Every woman should feel that it is a rare privilege to take part in national affairs. She should feel that it is her duty to do all in her power to secure peace for her country. That it is her God-given right to protect her home and her family from the horrors of war, as well as her sons and daughters from destruction and insidious propaganda.

We of the American Legion Auxiliary agree with all pacifists that the most beautiful and most thrilling picture in the world would be a motion picture of all nations uniting to throw away their arms and settling down to an eternity of friendship and peace but it is not necessary for me to tell you that this day is far distant. Your daily newspapers are filled with alarming dispatches from Europe and the Far East, telling you that no other nation has any intention of disarming. Far from it. We Americans must be practical if we wish to preserve peace for our country. The law of the survival of the fittest has always applied to nations. It is fantastic to think of America disarming while aggressor nations are scheming day and night for new fields to conquer.

The units that were hostesses at Hospital No. 48 during January were Cartersville, Americus and West End. All three sent checks to buy the patients' cigarettes. Bingo parties were staged by Mrs. John Lynch, hospital chairman for the first two units on separate occasions. The West End Auxiliary and post had their party on regular Legion and Auxiliary nights

Mrs. Robert H. Hart, whose marriage is announced today by her father, N. R. Smith, of Bristol, Va., the ceremony having taken place January 11 at the First Presbyterian church here, with Dr. William V. Gardner officiating. Mrs. Hart, the former Miss Norma Faye Smith, has resided in Atlanta for the past several years. Mr. Hart, who formerly made his home in Wethersfield, Conn., came to the city two years ago as assistant manager of Loew's Grand theater.

Auxiliary President Will Visit Here.

Mrs. James Morris, of Bismarck, N. D., national president of American Legion Auxiliary, will visit Georgia on March 4. She arrives in Atlanta early that morning, and will be guest of honor and speaker at a banquet to be held in Henry Grady hotel at 7 o'clock Saturday evening. She will visit Veterans' Hospital No. 48 during her visit here and will greet the state Legion Auxiliary executive board at the board meeting Sunday morning at 10:30 at Henry Grady hotel.

In January, the second Tuesday. Visiting Auxiliary and Legion members are invited to drop in on these nights. The February hostesses are Manchester, Elberton and Brookhaven, and they have already checked for cigars. On February 18, the Elberton unit had a bingo party.

Manchester will have their party sometime during the week of February 20. The Brookhaven unit gave the boys a Valentine party. When cigars were given patients and the unit put on a minstrel play. The Buford unit asked to return and have Mrs. Claude Herring present. "A Little Rhythm School House." The patients expressed surprise over this delightful party. Mrs. Thea Settle, president of the Buford unit, and several members served refreshments. J. F. Hutchinson, past commander of the Buford post, expressed regret that the State Conference and Kelly was attending the meeting of all police workers and could not be present.

Mrs. John Lynch spends hours in the hospital aiding wherever and whenever she can those who need her, particularly among the seriously ill patients and their families. Mrs. Lynch has charge of the disbursing fund for emergency help among the families. She is a great worker and the Auxiliary commands her very highly.

Mrs. H. E. Sanford Jr., of Atlanta, will be the delegate from Georgia to the rehabilitation conference in Memphis, beginning on February 20. Mrs. C. R. McQuown, of Atlanta, attended the conference on child welfare for Area C held in Little Rock last week.

Mrs. W. S. Davidson, state president of the American Legion Auxiliary, was the guest of honor at the recent meeting of the Paul E. Bolding unit, Gainesville. The meeting was held at the home of Mrs. W. C. Thomas with Mrs. Howard Hancock and Miss Helen Estes joint hostesses. Mrs. Davidson discussed the activities of the auxiliary, commending the local chapter which has received the national and state citation for membership.

New Horizons for Sight

In 1609, Galileo built a telescope—and proved that the earth revolved around the sun.

Every extension of man's vision has added to his knowledge. And every day, in our own lives, sight adds to our knowledge. 83% of what we know is learned through our eyes. How essential it is, then, that the eyesight of children in school be good. The soundness of their education, on which their entire future hinges, depends upon their vision. Yet one child in five has defective sight!

Make sure that your child is not one of them. Have his vision examined—equip him to get the most from his education—with more ease and comfort for himself.

Week of Prayer Announced Today

February 27-March 3 has been designated by B. W. M. U. of S. B. C. as a week of prayer and offering for home missions. This season has been observed annually by B. W. M. U. since 1895 and was first known as the self-denial offering for home missions. In 1922 the name was changed to "Thank Offering." In 1933, it was given the name Annie W. Armstrong, honoring the first secretary who served without salary during her 18 years as secretary. The southern union was saddened on December 20, 1938, when word was received of her passing.

The goal for this offering is $125,000. The salaries of 142 of the 236 missionaries engaged on this field will be supplied and $6,000 will go toward the education of missionaries' sons and daughters. Georgia joins with the other 17 states of the Southern Baptist convention in the observance of this season. Outstanding leaders will

Atlantans Board Palatial Steamers for South American Cruise

Friends Gather at Piers To Bid Travelers Farewell

By Sally Forth.

SELECTING to spend winter's final weeks aboard palatial liners cruising through the warm waters of South America are prominent Atlantans, who sailed recently from New York and New Jersey harbors amid shouts of good-byes from friends and admirers gathered on the piers to wish the passengers "bon voyage." The Nieuw Amsterdam proved a favorite with Atlanta travelers, for when the photographers ascended the steamer's gangplank they encountered prominent matrons and belles of this city strolling over the ship's spacious decks and in the corridors leading to staterooms filled with flowers, telegrams and gifts sent from relatives and friends "back home."

The Associated Press cameramen caught Mrs. J. N. McEachern, one of Atlanta's most beloved matrons, being greeted by her granddaughter, Mildred Dobbs, of Springfield, Ohio, who accompanied her grandmother on her journey. Mrs. Walter Hill and her daughter, Laura, accommodated the picture men by hesitating for a moment to have their photograph made on the steamer's "top deck."

Mrs. Walter Colquitt and Mrs. Edward Daniel were persuaded to pose in their ultra-smart traveling togs as they waved farewell from the ship's railing. Calls for "all ashore" prevented photographers from snapping pictures of other Atlantans aboard the steamer, including Mr. and Mrs. Jacob W. Patterson, Mrs. Inman Sanders, Mary Goodrum and Mrs. W. H. Hightower.

Hodgson chose the steamer Bremen for their cruise in tropical climes. They were discovered by the photographer as they opened bon-voyage packages filling their stateroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Madison Bell are enjoying a cruise in southern waters as passengers on the steamer Washington. They sailed last week from Havana, Cuba, for a voyage to Ocapulco, Mexico, through the Panama canal. The Bells will motor extensively through Mexico with Mexico City as their headquarters. They Miss Judy King at the left and Mrs. Blake Hodgson were snapped by an Associated Press photographer just as they opened one of the many farewell messages and gifts in their stateroom on the S. S. Bremen before sailing recently from New York for a South American cruise. Miss King, noted horsewoman, and Mrs. Hodgson spent several days in New York prior to sailing for their late winter cruise encircling the continent.

Among well-known Atlantans listed among passengers sailing on the liner Nieuw Amsterdam is Mrs. Edward Daniel, whose itinerary includes a circle tour to South America through the Panama canal and the Straits of Magellan. Associated Press photograph.

Friends Gather At Piers To Bid Travelers Farewell

will travel by rail to California, where they will be among Atlanta's first visitors to the World's Fair in San Francisco.
For their late winter travel, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas K. Glenn decided upon a voyage to Honolulu, where they will spend several weeks at the magnificent Royal Hawaiian hotel. The pair depart today for Los Angeles, Cal., from where they sail in early March aboard the steamer Lurline. The Clyde Kings Sr. are already encoined in Honolulu, where they are enjoying long sun-drenched days and cool blue nights amid a bower of tropical flowers and trees.

WHEN the S. S. Carinthia weighed anchor in New York harbor last week for a round-the-world cruise, that popular Atlanta bachelor, Esmond Brady, was listed among the passengers. Sailing down the east coast of South America, the Carinthia will round Cape Horn and head for the Pacific. An inveterate traveler, Esmond will visit points of interest in the Malay Archipelago, the African continent and Old World ports of call at which he has never touched before.

On the day he sailed at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, that erstwhile Atlantan, S. A. Sanders Jones, who now makes his home in New York, was host at luncheon in the Rainbow room of Radio City in his honor. Afterwards the entire party accompanied the Atlantan on board the Carinthia to bid him bon voyage. In addition to Esmond and Sanders, the party included Danny and Ida Sadler O'Day, of New York, and Fred and Margaret Nelson Williams, of Providence, R. I.

On the evening before he sailed, Esmond entertained the same group of close friends at dinner at the fashionable La Coc Roque, after which the party attended the theater to see one of the current hits.

WHEN Margaret McCarty becomes the bride of Dr. Benjamin Boyd, it will be a case of a wedding having brought about a wedding. For the affianced pair's romance began a year and a half ago when both were attendants in the wedding of the former Lamar Peschau and Jim Morton.

The impressive beauty of the April ceremony which will unite the couple and which will take place at St. Philip's cathedral will be greatly enhanced by the singing of the full-voiced choir. The group requested to be allowed to present a program of nuptial music in tribute to the stately bride-elect and her fiancé. Margaret, you know, is the popular soloist in the choir.

IN THE handsome array of wedding gifts which the former Daizy Belle Parker and John Fletcher received prior to their wedding on Saturday was a valuable Wedgewood dish more than 150 years old. It was brought to this country from Europe by a paternal ancestor of the bride, the latter being the sixth generation to possess the piece of china.

To follow the bridal custom of wearing "something old, something new, something borrowed and something blue," Daizy Belle wore a "new blue" dress to carry out two features of the old bridal custom. For her "old" piece, the bride wore a handsome diamond and pearl sunburst which belonged to her mother, Mrs. J. E. Parker, the former Daizy Belle Kelley, of South Carolina. For the "something borrowed" she carried an exquisite white linen handkerchief that belongs to Peggy Ulrich, whose mother, Mrs. LeRoy Ulrich, carried the "kerchief at her wedding. The first bride in Peggy's family to complete her wedding costume with the handkerchief was Mary Ball, an aunt of George Washington.

"GONE WITH THE WIND" IN THE MAKING

By ANNIE LAURIE FULLER KURTZ.

When "Gone With the Wind" makes its appearance on the screen, the vast public who will view this eagerly awaited production, will see for the first time in pictures a unique institution of ante-bellum days—the old cotton press. This press is to be constructed in the carpenter shop at the Selznick International studio, according to exact measurement from plans drawn by Wilbur G. Kurtz, technical adviser of the production.

In the summer of 1922, Mr. Kurtz and I experienced a real thrill when we found an old cotton press, all parts of which were still intact, though it had a considerable lean to one side. The press was on the Ellison plantation, in Ellerslie, Ga., Harris county, not far from Columbus. Mr. Kurtz climbed all over the tipsy monster, taking measurements, etc., dictating to me all sorts of figures which I obediently put down in a notebook without understanding in the least what they meant. He made careful sketches of every detail, and from these measurements, figures and sketches, Mr. Kurtz was able to make working drawings from which the "Gone With the Wind" cotton press is to be constructed.

After Eli Whitney's invention of the cotton gin, which now turned out the cleaned article in large quantities, a ready method for handling it became necessary. A new profession came into vogue; roving presswrights wandered over the country plying their trade. The principle of the machine was obvious, but its construction presented serious difficulties. The early printing press and James Watt's letter-copying press, not to mention the cider press were all more or less working models. The principle feature, the screw of metal, was not easily obtainable and the cost was prohibitive, so the presswrights set about making wooden screws. Oak logs were cut and trimmed to a uniform diameter of 18 to 21 inches and to a length of 16 feet.

The screw spiral was chiseled out by hand. The nut was a work of art, consisting of at least four and sometimes six blocks of wood. The rest of the press was mere carpentry. The screw was capped by a roof which moved with it, and was turned by two levers hewn from tall pines. Mules were used as motive power, being hitched to the levers with long ropes. The little darkies on the plantation liked to ride these mules on their rounds and they sang loudly as they did so. Despite the assiduous application of lubricants on screw and follow-block, the last three shrieks and groans of ligneous friction apprised the neighbors two miles away that "Colonel Carter's pressing today!"

The ante-bellum cotton press is a thing of the past. It has gone the way of the old covered bridge, the well-sweep, and the old water wheel. In "Gone With the Wind" it will once more raise its grotesquely picturesque bulk to the skies and extend its wide arms in proffered service.

At a luncheon last week I attempted to describe this unique affair for, upon asking if any one of the 300 guests had ever seen one, I found that no one ever had. I don't know how well I made them visualize it, but they seemed interested in its forthcoming appearance on the screen.

I must tell you about this luncheon, for it was given by the Assistance League of Los Angeles on Thursday, January 26, the day "Gone With the Wind" went into production, as a friendly gesture to the coming picturization of embattled Georgia. As I started for the luncheon, going out through the beautiful colonial entrance of the Selznick studios, I gave salute to the Confederate flag which had just been raised, and was proudly flying in the breeze.

The Assistance League is an organization similar to our Junior League. The waitresses are debs, sub-debs and minor film stars who give their services—all the proceeds going to charity. This particular luncheon was a very special one, a southern dinner and program, dedicated to the old south. The waitresses were dressed in gingham dresses, white aprons and bandannas, and they had their faces blackened! They were so cute as they "trekked" up and down between the tables to the tune of southern airs. The tables were covered with red and white checked cloths, the central decoration being bowls of cotton, artificial of course, and the dinner was "a la southern," fried chicken, disjointed, with all the trimmings.

A radio entertainer played and sang for us; she, too, was dressed in character. I was the southern guest of honor. Mrs. Warren Christian, formerly of Mobile, Ala., who is known out here for her very charming southern "accent," was mistress of ceremonies. She presented the entertainers, but when she introduced me, I nearly had heart failure; she had not told me I was to speak. I am not a speaker and I certainly am no Webster with a speech which I have been writing for 15 years tucked up my sleeve, awaiting only an impromptu occasion on which to deliver it.

But I did my best—I told them about the thing I felt to be of greatest interest to them—how the background for the old Atlanta scenes was being laid, the cotton press, the old car-shed, Tara, Aunt Pitty's house, Peachtree street, and Five Points.

With shaking knees I took my seat—then the pianist played "Dixie" when, of course, I arose again.

Just about the nicest person I know here is Miss Laura Hope Crews, who is to take the part of Aunt Pittypat. When I first met her and heard her naturally soft voice, I wondered why anyone would want to change it. But she insisted she wanted to talk as I talk for the picture. For a while, I just sat

Here is Wilbur Kurtz' working drawing from which the cotton press to be used in "Gone With the Wind" is being constructed. Many years ago Mr. and Mrs. Kurtz ran across an old cotton press on a plantation near Ellerslie, Ga. Climbing over the tipsy monster he made a careful examination of all parts, dictating all the while to his wife, who made notes, and at the same time sketching hastily the hard-to-remember details. From this data, the drawing was made, as presented above. Mr. Kurtz is technical director for "Gone With the Wind."

and conversed with her; then I read; when I had finished, she said, "Come, I want to have a record made of your voice so that I may study its tones." We drove first to the Brown Derby, where we had lunch, then to a broadcasting station in Hollywood. Here I sat before a "mike" and read five pages of script. We made three records before we got satisfactory results; guess I was a little bit scared, being somewhat of a novice.

Yesterday I saw this particular scene filmed; Miss Crews is adorable in her hoop-skirted black lace and frilled lace cap. She said her lines like a native, but I hope my coaching will not ruin her accent, for I would not mind if she gave me a few lessons and taught me to speak as she does.

You don't know how good it is to see folks from home when one is this far away. Yesterday we had as our guests Mr. and Mrs. De Sales Harrison, of Atlanta, and Mrs. Y. Frank Freeman, wife of the vice president of Paramount. Mrs. Freeman is formerly of Atlanta. During the forenoon we were on the set, watched the rehearsals and filming of some of the scenes, and met several of the stars; I introduced them to Miss Crews (Aunt Pitty), Miss Olivia de Havilland (Melanie), Miss Young (Mrs. Elsing), Miss Leigh (Scarlett), and to Mr. Cukor, the director.

After luncheon at the studio cafe, we visited the "forty acres," where Tara and the car-shed are located. It gave us all a thrill to drive down Peachtree street and through Five Points when we were 3,000 miles away from these locations!

The "All-American" Coach to Atlanta's Immigrants

By ELLEN ST. JOHN BARNWELL.

"The story of George Washington chopping down the cherry tree is the historic favorite of foreigners who come into this country," said Mrs. Maude T. Baker, instructor of immigrants for the federal and city government, and co-chairman of Americanization for the fifth district of the Georgia Federation of Women's Clubs.

"Foreigners are very deeply interested in the days of struggling American pioneers. As for the War Between the States—I am afraid they are partial to the south," Mrs. Baker laughed, "for, you see, I am a southerner, born in Atlanta!" Mrs. Baker symbolizes the whole United States to those whom she teaches the English language, American history, glorious truths of the United States constitution and other mental equipment for the thoughtful questions that must be answered on the citizenship examinations. Teaching immigrants in Atlanta since 1919, countless persons have become citizens because of her tutelage.

Now when someone can't pass the examinations, the officials at the old Post Office building just call up Mrs. Baker and send around the eager would-be American! She can fathom the depths of government so well and instruct so understandingly that records show there has never been a failure from anyone she has taught. In the afternoons she conducts classes at the Opportunity school. The evenings finds Mrs. Baker busy revealing the wonders of America to immigrants at Central Night school.

Recently when the largest number of foreigners since 1928 became citizens, Mrs. Baker was in the audience, for several of her pupils were being "graduated" in Judge Marvin E. Underwood's court. She was among the club representatives who were present to officially welcome the new citizens and congratulate them on their vows. Little American flags, held by the clubwomen, were fluttering. There was a dramatic moment after Judge Underwood's impressive ceremony when these small symbols went out into the hands that had just sworn allegiance to the American flag for the first time! Historic booklets were given and the gracious gesture was completed.

But once a citizen, it does not mean the immigrant has to leave Mrs. Baker's class. He may keep right on learning until he is ready to enter the other classes in the Opportunity school and equip himself for business. Although the educational standard was exceptionally fine this year, as Judge Underwood pointed out—every foreigner at least had a high school education—there is much to be learned by an immigrant before he can pass the test.

So rigid are the exams, that many born Americans would have to do some deep quick thinking were it suddenly necessary for everybody who entered the post office to sit right down and take the immigrant citizen test!

CLASS ROMANCE.

Romance, tragedy, pathos and humor have all been in tense little dramas in Mrs. Baker's classes. She recalls two married German couples whose romance language began while she was teaching them English. "At one time there was quite a lively romance. An attractive man from Switzerland and an equally handsome man from Greece both fell in love with a vivacious young lady from France whom they met in my class. All the year the courtship went on with the lessons. Finally, she accepted the Swiss lad who knew fluent French," said Mrs. Baker.

"Although I do not speak the various languages," Mrs. Baker explained, "I do understand them. Many of the foreigners speak several tongues and catch on rapidly. As a whole, the German men grasp English more quickly than any others, and the Greek women have the most dexterity learning the language. The hardest sound to manage is the 'th' and the easiest is the 'w'."

Mrs. Maude T. Baker, instructor of immigrants for the federal and city government, conducts classes in the afternoons at the Opportunity school, and at nights at the Central Night school.

"People from the Isle of Rhodes speak both Spanish and Italian. Before the World War, Spanish was the principal language. Afterwards, Rhodes was given to Italy and all the population learned to speak Italian."

Of all the nationalities she has taught here, there have been more Russians—next Poles and third, Germans. Mrs. Baker tells the story of three devoted brothers from Russia who by co-operation are now successful, well-educated men.

"One brother would work and earn enough to take care of the other two who would devote their entire time to studies. They then would change about until each had carried the financial burden. In that way the three went through our classes but Emory University. Now one is a physician in New York city and the other two brothers are doctors in the northwest."

On a certain afternoon Mrs. Baker looked up from her desk to see a foreign-born woman standing before her. She grasped a letter in her outstretched hand.

"Read it to me," she cried. Her eyes were pleading. "You taught my boy to read, to write English. He went away. I learn to speak English. I cannot read English; I cannot write English. There was despair in her voice. 'My own boy wrote to me; I don't know what he said!'"

Although the mother admitted being over 70 years old, before long Mrs. Baker had her reading and answering the letters—in English! The son's letters would encourage her, "Momma, you are doing fine!" No longer were the mother and son without communication.

A near tragic incident with a happy ending occurred when a family from another country was admitted to America—all but one who had been a cripple from birth. So badly was he crippled that the officials would not permit him entrance for fear he would become a dependent on charity. The rest of the brothers and sisters, Mrs. Baker taught in her class. She knew their sorrow. If only they could get the beloved brother into this country!

Finally, the members of the family were making enough money to assure the officials they would care for their crippled brother—he would never be dependent on American charity. At last he entered the United States, came to Atlanta and enrolled in Mrs. Baker's class. He learned rapidly, and today the cripple is earning more than any other member of his family!

INDUSTRIAL AMBITIONS.

In addition to deep admiration, the foreign students have made Mrs. Baker many gifts. She is particularly proud of the handsome table cloth that several Italian women made for her. Each worked on a part of the embroidery and the complete cloth is exquisite.

Their needlework is so well done that Mrs. Baker urges the women to enter their sewing in the Southeastern Fair. Last fall one woman exhibited her handmade bedspread and won a $25 prize!

Germans and Italians, Mrs. Baker finds, are especially interested in art and music. A party at her home for the foreigners is always gay with many musical instruments. Although at first some immigrants are unable to enter into the conversations, because there is no common language, music and art speak and entertain all.

The young girls are interested in the beauty culture course offered at the Opportunity school, as well as the trade millinery.

The Cuban boys from Mrs. Baker's class are attracted to the merchants' trade course. This fact takes on added importance, after Senator Walter F. George, advocating South American trade as the future of America, in his address to the National Convention of Chemists and Colorists meeting in Atlanta last November. Here is evidence that young Cubans in America are outstandingly interested in trade.

In January an immigration ceremony was held. In June a new group will repeat the vows in the federal court. Already, preparations are being made and studies will continue under Mrs. Baker.

Educated at Girls' High school, Mrs. Baker received her A. B. degree from Oglethorpe University. At present, despite her other duties, she is working on her masters' degree. In 1919 she began teaching immigrants in the Central Night school and instructed there continuously until 1923 when Opportunity school was opened.

Finding that women could not attend the evening classes, Mrs. Baker established, in 1923, special instructions which she took into the homes. Meeting in social gatherings, at first in her home and then another, the classes would be held in the afternoons. And the hospitality offered reflected the customs of varied native lands.

This attractive slender woman has wavy silver hair, a gracious, calm manner, a depth of understanding and a twinkle in her eye. A grandmother herself, she has a friendly ability to make all ages feel "at home."

And there, studying under Mrs. Baker, are people of various nationalities, different ages and religions—each is anxious to attain one goal, citizenship. She is coaching them in that intangible subject, Americanization, helping them to be versed in all America. Mrs. Baker is truly an "all American" coach.

Out of Oriental Bombing, A Dance Is Born

By LEE ROGERS.

The little Chicago dancer who ambled aimlessly through the streets of Shanghai during two Japanese bombing attacks and emerged unscathed but with a dance sensation of 1938, is an Atlanta visitor.

Terese Rudolph, originator of the "Shrapnel Swing," is by her own admission one of the three best dancers on the American stage. That she is not alone in this belief is evidenced in a bulging book of newspaper clippings gathered during frequent tours of the United States, Europe and the Orient.

It was during her first and only tour of the Orient that the little Chicago dancer got the "break" that put her on the front page of the world's newspapers.

These Rudolph, in case you have forgotten in the elapsed two years, was the glamour girl who furnished extra cable copy for the news hounds when the Japanese first dropped bombs on the International Settlement of Shanghai in August, 1937. Fainting during the first bombing which killed and injured thousands about her, Terese rambled among the ruins for days before some friend found her and took her to a make-shift hospital.

"I woke up in the Park hotel several days later feeling the building shake each time the anti-aircraft gun on the roof was fired," she said.

She was on the President Hoover when it was bombed by the Chinese. She saw the horrors of war.

And out of the experience came the dance, "Shrapnel Swing," which made her famous almost overnight.

In Atlanta last week, en route to Columbus, Ga., to appear on a vaudeville program, Terese told her war-time experiences. She opens today (Sunday) for a week's engagement at a local theater.

She will do her dance here. It was first presented before Hollywood celebrities in the Beverly Hills Country Club.

In the dance are seven emotions—the emotions through which Terese passed on her trip to Shanghai to appear as the featured performer at the swank Cathay hotel in the cosmopolitan atmosphere of the International Settlement, along the Bund.

First she appears in a gay mood—"Hello Shanghai" and "Shanghai Shambles." Then there is an attentive air turned up as the "War Birds Approach." She dodges as the "Shrapnel Bursts." Then in sequence follows "Fear," "Stunned" and the dead "Faint." All the national picture magazines carried the picture story of the dance.

Miss Rudolph went to the Orient to gather authentic Oriental dance material. She came back with a more authentic dance than that for which she bargained.

"Although I have lived in Chicago all my life," she quipped, "the sound of the rat-tat-tat bang of the machine guns was new to me. Even though we were anxious, we were not frightened at first because as you know, the Cathay hotel is in the International Settlement and of course no one would touch that—no one. Fires blazed in the Chinese sections surrounding the Settlement. Having been brought up with the story of Mrs. O'Leary's cow and the subsequent results I feared a similar disaster might be fanned into being by the treacherous typhoon which was raging."

Suddenly out of a clear sky and much to our horror a huge bomb was released and began heading straight toward us. We were paralyzed with fear that we were unable to move, and before we had realized it the bomb had crashed into the pavement and exploded with a terrific roar, making a shambles of everything in the area. I was so struck with shock that I fainted. . . . I came to in bed at the Park hotel and was told someone had recognized me wandering about the streets and had picked me up."

Miss Rudolph described the horror of the days that followed as the American citizens awaited orders to evacuate. The American orders were the last to come through. Then there was the mad rush to pack belongings into one suit case—all the baggage allowed the fleeing citizens who were ordered into the steerage quarters of the President Hoover. During the elapsing time, the citizens watched the fighting from the roof of the Park hotel.

The Park hotel, with its 20 stories, was the tallest building in the city. From the roof on the 15th floor we had views in all directions of the city below. The roof tops were filled with curious spectators watching the planes fly overhead and when the planes flew low everyone would duck under cover. Planes circled the hotel constantly. During the bombings, the dancer ran out amidst the ruins and took pictures of the scene which later were printed in one of the Chicago papers. Then came the evacuation orders.

"Trying to pack what originally had fit into a trunk and seven suitcases into one allotted suitcase was a feat that would have strained the ability of Houdini. What to take and what to leave behind. It would be hard going indeed without street clothes and no work without costumes. The costumes won."

Atlanta To Be Center of Southern Baptist Revival

By LUKE GREENE.

Spiritual fires are flaming again in the southland!

This time the Baptists are carrying the torch. They are out to win approximately 400,000 souls during 1939. They are visioning a great religious awakening that may make itself felt for the next 20 years—an awakening that will go down in history as many have in the past.

Oldtimers remember well those great spiritual revivals of yesteryear. They remember sitting or standing beneath brush arbors and listening to the soul-stirring words of impassioned ministers of the gospel. They remember the time when they themselves walked down to the altar and announced to the world they had been saved. They have vivid recollections of street meetings and great outdoor gatherings and the salvaging of thousands of lost souls.

The Baptists hope to revive some of this spiritual fervor during the 1939 campaign. Atlanta will be the generating point of the revival. From it will radiate the spiritual waves that are expected to touch the hearts of thousands of persons all over the south.

Directing this vast program is a dynamic Baptist leader. His name is Dr. Roland Q. Leavell. He talks and lives evangelism. He is superintendent of evangelism for the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Dr. Leavell knows the direction in which he is headed. He knows the great rank and file of southern Baptists want a revival of something similar to the old-time religion. He knows they are genuinely interested in the real article. Too often they have been misled by imitations. Many of them have become skeptical. But he realizes they still yearn for pure and simple spirituality. With the aid of Dr. L. R. Scarborough, president of the Southern Baptist Convention, he hopes to give it to them.

This revival has been smoldering for some time. Preparations for it began in the middle of last year. Thousands of handbooks outlining the program have gone out to ministers and evangelistic leaders all over the south. But the real awakening is just now getting underway.

"Military strategists know that a battle is won before it is fought," Dr. Leavell said. "The groundwork for this revival was laid last June when leaders gathered in Nashville, Tenn. At that time we planned our objectives and really launched the program."

It is no plan to raise money. It is a plan to save souls. The last great campaign conducted by Baptists was in 1919. This was called the seventy-five million campaign. It was a campaign to raise money. Atlanta was the focal point.

Dr. Leavell thinks the present program is taking on more significance because it is on a spiritual rather than a monetary basis. There's no better way to unite Baptists, he says, than on a soul-winning program.

There are several reasons, Dr. Leavell explained, why 1939 is a good year for such a revival to have its beginning. There will be three world meetings in the United States this year. One—the Baptist World Alliance—will be held in Atlanta. Then there are the world fairs in New York and San Francisco.

Thousands of delegates from foreign lands will be attending these meetings. If the northern Christians will co-operate, Dr. Leavell thinks the visitors can be sent back to their native countries with their hearts on fire with spiritual zeal.

As evidence of his enthusiasm, Dr. Leavell predicts the revival will more nearly approach Pentecost in the first century than anything that has ever happened in this country.

"You remember in the first century people from all parts of the earth gathered in Jerusalem and when they caught the fire of Jesus Christ they went back to their homelands as missionaries," he said. "It is possible for us to do virtually the same thing. This is the year of all years to send the gospel all over the world."

The goal of the Baptist leaders will be to enlist one new convert for every 12 members of the Baptist church in the south. If this is accomplished, a total of 382,960 persons will be brought into the church.

The great revivals of the past, like the great awakening which began in 1734 and the revival of 1800, which began in 1785 and continued for 30 years, were not revivals of a season or a year's duration," Dr. Leavell said. "They were revivals that continued for nearly a generation."

"We see 1939 as the time for us to intensify the revival which began in 1937 and gained great momentum in 1938. In 1936 the southern Baptists reached an all-time low in percentage of baptisms per church member. That year there were 191,993 baptisms, or one for every 23.35 members of our churches. In 1937 the total was 204,567, or one for every 22.46 members."

The 1939 version of Baptist evangelism differs greatly from that of several years ago, Dr. Leavell pointed out. Emphasis will be placed on enlistment and training of those who come into the church rather than just getting them in. It is the broader conception of evangelism.

"As the negro said, we are not just going to 'dip 'um and drap 'um,' but we are going to do something about them after we get them," Dr. Leavell said.

Another difference will be the personnel of the leaders. Ten or 15 years ago it was the custom to bring in an eloquent preacher—with a corps of trained workers, open the city's tabernacle to him, place plenty of funds at his disposal and then let him go to work.

In this revival campaign, however, the responsibility will be placed on the pastors and the members of the churches. It will mean a strengthening of the local churches. It will work out much better, Dr. Leavell believes, than having a big downtown meeting where the strength of the spiritual power is largely dissipated before it gets back to the local church.

"During the days of the depression our people were intensely interested in organizing internally," Dr. Leavell continued. "Now we are going into the field on a new mission. Not a single new person has been employed to promote the campaign."

The revival is not designed as a movement to kill Communism. It will attempt to overcome anything that is anti-Christ but it is not specifically aimed at Communism. It will attempt to show that the way of Christ is the way to a more abundant life.

"This is our reaction to Communism rather than an effort to overcome it," Dr. Leavell said.

Baptists right now is that they are not divided over any issue, he went on. "They are not fighting over evolution or any creed and they have largely solved the problem of paying their debts."

"Everything seems to indicate that we are destined for a generation of real spiritual awakening. I sincerely believe it will materialize, unless we have a war or some other great catastrophe. Revivals have always started slowly and built up. I hope this one will be felt for the next 20 years."

"In the past, evangelistic sermons have been too largely given over to sensationalism without spirituality; a motion without instruction; an exhortation without indoctrination; criticism without construction; campaign without continuity of effort; in gathering without personal work; publicity without prayer."

"We want to mold evangelistic sermonizing along the line which Simon Peter used at Pentecost when he expounded the great doctrine of grace and let truth be the power rather than the man-made machinery and psychological manipulation of folks." Dr. Leavell wants to revive every type of evangelism—street preaching, evangelism in the home, personal witnessing in stores and places of amusement.

Here are the eight principal objectives of the revival:

1. Prayer for a great increase in conversions and baptisms in every community of the south.

2. Enlistment of a multitude of soul-winners from the rank and file of the church members, who will present the gospel to millions of lost persons, especially those who do not attend Sunday school and church services.

3. Establishment of the family altar in homes.

4. A revival meeting in every one of the 24,844 southern Baptist churches and in every unchurched community.

5. A well-defined and carefully organized soul-winning program in every district association.

6. A co-operative soul-winning program by the Baptist churches in every city.

7. An adequate program of conservation of the results of the southwide Baptist revival through enlistment, training and stewardship.

8. An exaltation of the ministry of preaching, and a strong emphasis upon preaching the great fundamental doctrines of grace during revival meetings.

Atlanta To Be Center.

Atlanta will be one of the great centers for the new movement. There are 56,779 Baptists in Atlanta. If the leaders succeed in winning one new soul for every 12 members, it will mean approximately 4,700 new members.

During a city-wide evangelistic campaign here last April, there were 2,712 additions to the various Atlanta churches, 1,779 of which were by baptism.

Pointing to the increasing interest in religion, Dr. Leavell said there were only 19,456 baptisms in Georgia during 1937 as compared with 24,111 in 1938. Similar increases have been noted in other states.

Dr. Leavell is now busily engaged in sending out handbooks and other information to ministers and leaders to aid them in carrying out the revival. He has written a special book called "Helping Others to Become Christians" for the Woman's Missionary Union. He also is compiling 16 sermons by outstanding ministers on "Preaching the Doctrines of Grace."

Something more should be said about Dr. Leavell as a leader. He is one of those few men of the gospel who are not afraid to put position and prominence aside and preach from the streets. He has delivered his Christian message from Atlanta's own streets.

People may shy away, but he thinks street preaching has declined largely because it has been taken over by fanatics. During one of his street sermons one day, he was surprised to receive the commendation of a prominent Atlanta banker.

Dr. Leavell has a bachelor of arts and master of arts degree from the University of Mississippi. He attended the Theological Seminary at Louisville where he received his Th.D. and Th.M. degrees. In 1937 Mercer University, at Macon, honored him with a D. D. degree. While at the University of Mississippi he was a member of the Eta chapter of Sigma Chi, social fraternity.

During the last year he has written three books, bringing his total to six. In 1934 and again in 1937 he conducted groups of students on tours through Europe and the Holy Land. For a time he was pastor at the University of Mississippi at Oxford, Miss., and later was pastor in Gainesville, Ga. He was chaplain of Riverside Military Academy for five years and has held meetings in colleges and universities all over the south.

But everywhere the name of Dr. Roland Q. Leavell is synonymous with evangelism.

Dr. Roland Q. Leavell, dynamic Baptist leader and superintendent of Evangelism, for the Home Mission Board of the Southern Baptist convention, is directing the movement for a south-wide revival.

Terese Rudolph, originator of the "Shrapnel Swing," was in Shanghai during two Japanese bombing attacks.

"Learning" and Fun Go Hand-in-Hand

You'll have to learn new definitions of work and play if you're to talk the language of students at Black Mountain College. Building a fence, for instance, is very decidedly play. Amusing themselves with the hammers in the above picture are Sue Spayth, of Dannelen, N. J., and Phyllis Josephs, of Arden, Del. Derek Bovington, of Boston, is holding the rail for them.

By JIMMIE SCHULTZ.

The fine art of having a good time and keeping physically fit at a monthly cost slightly less than the price of three penny sticks of chewing gum is being perfected at a story-book seat of higher learning, in the heart of western North Carolina's rugged mountain peaks.

Old Henry David Thoreau, who did a little practical experimenting himself along the lines of economical living—and was so proud of his accomplishments that he penned a 400-page opus on the subject—would turn green with envy if he were alive today and could run a thrifty eye down the 1938 expense account for athletics at Black Mountain College.

For during last year's nine school months, Black Mountain College added a new item to its long list of unconventionalities by squandering exactly $12.80 on sports activities.

If you divide that figure by nine and then divide again by 50 (for that is the number of students enrolled at the school, you will find the per capita cost of athletics at the college for a period of one month was in the neighborhood of 2.6 cents.

The figure doesn't seem a particularly extravagant one when you stop to remember that Yale University, up in New Haven, Conn., wrote checks totalling $494,352 last year to theoretically accomplish the same result.

When football schedules are printed and distributed next fall, you will look in vain for the name of Black Mountain College. It will be the same story when basketball, baseball, track, tennis and swimming schedules roll from the press.

But waste no needless sympathy on the students enrolled there. The boys in the press coop may never see them in action, but there is action, all the same. And there are rosy cheeks, strong, lithe bodies and perfectly normal appetites to show for it, too.

Sacrilegious as it may sound, the idea prevails at Black Mountain that sports were made for the individual and not individuals for the sport. And, as is the hallowed tradition at Oxford, all 50 students spend the better part of the afternoon in recreation of their own choosing.

There's a wide variety of things to do, too, but all of them are of such a nature as to transmit only the very feeblest of reverberations to the bank teller's cage. For students at the college have struck such a happy medium between work and play that they are blissfully unable to distinguish one from the other.

Economy is largely a matter of choice rather than of necessity, for the majority of the students are from well-to-do families and might have enrolled at Princeton or Vassar had they so desired. Not a one of the 50, incidentally, is from North Carolina. But fully two dozen other states of the Union are represented.

The college was established eight years ago by a group of disgruntled intellectuals who had grown dissatisfied with prevailing notions of higher education. Absolute freedom for both students and instructors is the keynote of the institution. There are no rules and only the faintest sort of administrative organization. Students attend or stay away from classes purely as a matter of choice, and classes are nothing more formidable than ultra-informal bull sessions in which two or three boys and girls sit around and discuss some particular topic with an instructor between pulls on their pipes and cigarettes.

Class costumes are whatever the students happen to be wearing when the class period rolls around—slacks, shorts, bathing suits, or even less.

The professors, most of them with Ph. D. degrees and brilliant teaching records, are usually clad in a similar fashion.

Such customs took the scholastic world somewhat aback when news of them began leaking out several years ago. This year the school exploded another bombshell by submitting the smallest athletic expense account of any college in the country.

Athletic directors at Harvard and Princeton have probably never heard of some of the items of equipment which figure in the current outdoor sport of the hour. A lot of the students themselves hadn't heard of them six months ago, but they've taken to them as a debutante takes to mink coats and diamond bracelets.

We hitched a ride last week on the big truck which was carrying a load of students from the campus to a 700-acre tract purchased some months ago by the institution at Lake Eden, a beautiful mountainous spot about two miles from the school. Eventually this tract will provide sites for a series of new buildings the institution plans to erect. Right now, however, it is serving the role of athletic field for the student body.

We watched with a sort of mild interest as a score of students tumbled from the truck with post-hole diggers, hammers, saws, two-edged axes, picks, shovels and a box full of steel wedges. And then our eyes popped out like two springy jacks-in-the-box as we saw a dozen attractive coeds shoulder their share of these implements and set to work—beg pardon, set to play—like so many amazons of the legend.

We were accustomed, you see, to finding coeds taking their afternoon exercise at the soda bar in the corner drug store. And it sort of surprised us at first to see a cute little blond in blue slacks banging the post-hole digger into the hard red clay and bringing out big bites of dirt while two similarly clad young ladies pounded a rail into place on the fence that was under construction.

Meanwhile the boys—boys who two hours before had been sketching on drawing boards, studying hidden meanings in Shakespeare or flirting with the intricacies of calculus—were felling trees and splitting them into passably good rails.

We meandered among them and found—yes, it was hard for us to believe it, too—that they were enjoying the "sport" as much as you'd ever want to see a person enjoy a sport. The girls expected, and the boys granted, no inequalities in the "fun."

Students, we learned, didn't build fences like this every day. For variety they spend some of their afternoons cutting dirt roads into the wilder areas of the wooded tract or clearing away the underbrush with which the place is cursed.

But don't get the wrong idea. All play at Black Mountain College is not of the sort you and I would call work. There are the conventional forms of fun, too, but, like everything else at this topsy-turvy place, they are engaged in a very unconventional manner.

There's a big gymnasium for basketball, badminton, handball or what-have-you. But it isn't the sort of gymnasium to which a person needs to carry a checkbook with him. Like their class clothes, their gym costumes are of the most informal and varied nature.

Girls and boys play together, and members of the "weaker" sex are even welcomed to positions on such impromptu football eleven as are organized from time to time during the fall. A few weeks ago two brothers with an inclination for fisticuffs decided the gym needed a punching dummy for budding pugilists. Instead of petitioning the administrative council for funds, the boys dug down into their own financial resources, came up with two bits between them, purchased a second-hand canvas feed bag therewith and stuffed it with the innards of an unused bed tick they found in one of the dormitory rooms. Now they can punch to their hearts' content, and no treasurer need worry about making a budget balance as a result of the new equipment.

There's a swimming pool, too, but on the monthly expense account you'll find no notation of payments for having water pumped into it. An obliging brook which trickles its way down the mountain beside the college keeps the concrete basin filled to overflowing at all times with clean, fresh water.

Playing tennis at Black Mountain has two distinct aspects, but both are play, mind you. First there is the aspect of scraping and rolling the courts. Then there's the secondary aspect of lambasting the ball back and forth across the net until the courts need scraping and rolling again.

There are other ways of having a good time besides those calling for a play of the muscles, but they are also of such a nature as to be enjoyed within an expense range that would make a heart pitter-patter for sheer joy.

Corn husking, a sport good enough for their great-grandfathers, is also good enough for them. Each afternoon several dozen boys and girls gather in the basement of the gymnasium building and set to play with a gusto on the mountain of unstripped corn housed there. The place becomes a madhouse of fun and laughter as the ears are unhusked and thrown into a pile at one side of the room.

Occasionally the merriment rises to an even higher pitch than usual. For occasionally some young male husker undresses an ear of corn that has red instead of white grains. And when that happens, something else happens, too. For every one familiar with the noble sport of corn husking knows that when a young swain falls heir to a cob of crimson corn, he's entitled to give his lady friend a nice, long kiss. The girls are as glad as the boys when a red ear of corn makes its appearance.

Annals of college history have yet to record the case of an institution of higher learning whose students wouldn't just about a soon dance as eat. Black Mountain is no exception. But dances, like other things there, are not pretext for SOS-ing papa for a fresh supply of bank notes.

A gentleman who spends his daylight hours expounding the beauties of the Greek and Latin classics pulls up a chair to the piano each evening and begins to finger out current dance tunes. And eager coeds and their partners, sans benefit of gardenias and stiff collars, dance as long as they like to the music of this one-man orchestra.

Students may go to the village for their drama, but there's really no necessity for it. A group of fellow students interested in the producing end of the business stage the finest of current and classic scripts at frequent intervals, and the admission price is approximately the same as the cost of a good deep breath of mountain air.

Endless as a circle is the long list of other sports and forms of recreation which have been developed at the college with little or no financial outlay. Proud men at Princeton and belles from Vassar might find them a bit irregular.

But students at Black Mountain College find them fun. And, since what the student wants is what he gets at this unique institution, the bet's a safe one that you will continue to find boys and girls there having the time of their young lives and keeping in the physical "pink" at a monthly cost slightly less than the price of three penny sticks of chewing gum.

Hoover was anchored at the head of the Yangtze river waiting for the tide to change prior to sailing up the Whangpoo river to load on luggage and pick up more Shanghai refugees.

"I was in my cabin," Miss Rudolph said, "absorbed in the gory details of a Chinese riot when the familiar whirr of aeroplanes low overhead came closer. I stuck my head out of my porthole just in time to see a bomb fall about 100 feet in front of me into the water. I was so astonished and frightened my eyes almost fell into the water, too. When I had collected myself sufficiently to pull my head in again, I rushed out of my cabin without thought as to where I would go to be safe from the bombs. Everyone ran helter skelter seeking safety. Shouts of 'They're bombing us' rang through the boat."

"A little boy near me hollered, 'Look, Mom, a power dive!'"

"Panic gripped me and I was unable to find my life preserver. The boy in the adjoining cabin chivalrously found one for me, despite the pleas of his mother to get below. I passed the dining room steward and several pursers who were deathly white and I can readily say I have never seen men so obviously frightened and so obviously unashamed of it."

"We sat in the dining salon on the floor huddled together, some under tables. One old lady had a serving tray over her head. A week of warfare in Shanghai had somewhat steered my nerves to the deafening noises and violent shakings of bombs and guns, but after the fourth deafening crash we knew that the bombing was 100 per cent intentional and the Hoover was an unprotected target. The bombs were dropped at five-minute intervals and between each a silence reigned, broken only by the audible prayers of the adults or the whimperings of a child."

"Suddenly my fear passed and I was quite ready to die. After the twelfth bomb hit the ship's smoke stack, the planes flew away."

One of the ship's passengers committed suicide before the Hoover reached San Francisco.

The "Shrapnel Swing" was a combination of all these—and other—war-time experiences, Miss Rudolph said. It was a more or less spontaneous creation which occurred to her during a routine practice, but a year ago before Americans had become used to Japs dropping bombs on helpless Chinese. It immediately caught the public fancy and helped the Hungarian-born dancer to the front pages and headline stage positions.

Basketball Has Gone Feminine!

By BILL MUNDAY.

Bemoaning abolishment of the tip-off and decrying rules which prevent bodily contact, old-timers declare that basketball today is not the spectacle it was two and three decades ago. The spine-thrilling thrills and the science of the game have been nullified by the rulemakers, they concur. "They have taken the sport away from the fans," declares Rufus Bass, now a prominent local insurance man, who for years was a scintillant on those old Atlanta Athletic Club teams which boasted such names as Dick Jemison, former sports editor of The Constitution; Scappy Sullivan, Alfred Scott, Johnny Westmoreland, Johnny Graves, Emory Cooke, Johnny Oliver, Steve Hartney, Pie Weaver, Louie Morrison, Walter Eubard, Ed and Frank Carter, Joe Singleton, Tom Bryan and others—during the days when the Double A. C. was monarch or all surveyed in the then S. I. A. A., back in the late pre and early post twenties.

"When a person pays his money to witness a sporting event, he desires action," declares Mr. Bass. "He likes to see the gladiators battling sans interruption every minute."

"But he does not get that now. The ball only briefly is in play because the instant someone touches, accidentally or otherwise, an opposing player, under present statutes, that is a foul. Time out for the shot."

"Not so when I came along. There were only three foul penalties—slugging, tripping and running with the ball, the latter merely a technical foul. Of course, four personal fouls as today, automatically would bring a player's banishment. No one, however, was ever ejected. Why? Fouls rarely were called. And the side fouled had only one shot."

"Hacking, holding, blocking and charging were unknown. To be sure the business was rough. And the morning after a contest, if a player didn't have a bruised rib or a black eye, his constituents would brand him as a 'loafer'."

"But, with players being hurled helter-skelter on the court and oftentimes under the baskets pitched into the second and third row of seats, patrons were accorded a real show."

It was here that the writer recalled an incident in the old Moss auditorium in Athens in 1923 when Joe Bennett, of the University of Georgia, flipped Rufus into the press table under the north basket.

"That was kid's play," Rufus said when reminded of the toss. "Why in the national amateur tournament in Kansas City in 1921, I was hurled into the fifth row. Too bad, during the era of which I speak, when a man left his feet to take the ball off the backboard, he would be cut down as is a sidekick in football by a downfield blocker."

Bass' reflections are shared by Charlie Thompson, who performed with the University of Georgia, and Ed Liddell, Marist star, whose playing days were before de war.

"No, basketball is not the sport it once was," they agree.

Remembering the great Fulton High girls' team of 1916-17-18, which played under boys' rules with Marietta High and Decatur High as chief rivals—and the ladies were plenty rough, too—this correspondent desired their opinions contrasting the present-day style of play with that which they pursued. Identities through marriage lost, however, made him unable to locate them. Anyway, nee Ruth Williams, Martha Branham, Frances Phillips, sister of the redoubtable "Pup," Nina Graves "Red" Walker, etc., gave the folks countless thrills—and their adversaries head and body aches—down at the old Atlanta Athletic Club on Auburn avenue.

"The science of basketball disappeared when the tip-off was barred," Rufus Bass avers. "With the tip-off signals could be run and the club with a center who could get it oftentimes would score in a second or two. Plays designed from it were practiced incessantly. By the same token a team—soon perceiving that its middle man couldn't fetch the toss-up—necessarily would set a defense to stop its foes' mapped stratagems."

"And I have never believed in penalizing a team which has scored. Present rules do. When you shoot a basket you immediately must go on the defense and quickly, too. The aggregation scored upon, given possession of the spheroid under your basket, with a floor's-length pass is apt to tally pronto—unless you are on the spot to establish a defense."

"No, basketball is on the down grade. Destroy the interest, and you destroy the game."

Maybe, Rufus is prejudiced. Anyway, the game seems to be thriving. Practically every village and hamlet in the state has a pair of teams—boys and girls. The rural youngsters start practicing when school convenes on Labor Day inaugurate competition in October, and continue warfare until cotton-planting time.

But now the ladies play under girls' rules!

Remember these lads? They played basketball when the game was a rough-and-tumble affair and a better spectacle for the fans than now, declares Rufus Bass and in whose sentiments they heartily concur. Presenting the great 1921 Atlanta Athletic Club team which, after annihilating everything in their territory, travelled to the semi-finals in the national amateur tournament in Kansas City, being nosed out in a thriller by Northwestern University. Two of the boys, Scappy Sullivan and Johnny Graves, were mentioned for all-American honors. Back row, left to right, Sullivan, Coach Joe Bean, Graves, middle row, Joe Singleton, Johnny Westmoreland, Steve Hartney; front row, Tom Bryan, Louie Morrison, Alfred Scott, Bass.

Former Georgian Wins Acclaim

By TOM O'BRIEN.

Acclaimed in Europe and in this country for his work through the medium of water-colors and oil, Philip Giddens, a Georgia boy, is considered one of the foremost painters of children's portraits in the United States.

Giddens, born in Cuthbert, Ga., 1898, was graduated from Georgia Tech in 1920. Since then he has risen rapidly in his field after studying and traveling in 15 different countries.

His portraits have been exhibited in the Royal Academy in London and in the Paris Grand Salon, the latter distinction coming as the result of receiving honorable mention for an etching of the Mosque of St. Sophia in Constantinople.

Giddens maintains two studios, one in New York city and the other in Palm Beach, Fla., where he works during the winter months. Last winter he won a prize of $100 for a portrait exhibited by the Society of Fine Arts in Palm Beach. He has recently been made a member of the art committee of the new Palm Beach Museum.

Although he enjoys New York city, he still feels the south is his home. He is socially prominent in Manhattan, his name being in the Social Register. He has been entertained by Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and Mrs. Herbert Hoover. For all his social engagements, Giddens keeps regular hours, never staying too late at a party as to affect his work the next day. Golf is his favorite recreation.

Shortly before Christmas he was called to St. Louis, Mo., to do a portrait of a child. That is how far-flung his reputation is for this type of work. He attributes his success in this sphere of art work to his understanding of "child psychology."

Philip Giddens, a native Georgian, has won wide acclaim for his paintings. He is considered one of the foremost painters of children's portraits in the United States.

WHEN JUSTICE TRIUMPHED

Bizarre Mystery of Federal Man Who Disappeared

By PETER LEVINS.

One of the most bizarre criminal cases in the history of the Pacific Northwest got under way September 5, 1928, with the disappearance of James Eugene Bassett, 35, a former navy ensign in the employ of the government civil service.

Bassett, ordered transferred from the east coast to the Philippines, reached Seattle early that month and visited at the home of his brother-in-law and sister, Commander and Mrs. Theodore H. Winters, in Bremerton, the Puget sound Navy Yard community about 12 miles from Seattle. He planned to sail for the Orient on September 10.

Bassett had crossed the country in his own car, a coupe, which he intended to sell before leaving. Accordingly he had inserted an advertisement in a Seattle newspaper, offering the car for sale. On September 5 a man answered the advertisement and Bassett drove off with him in the coupe.

That was the last seen of the one-time ensign.

The next day Mrs. Winters received a telegram, saying her brother had gone to Vancouver, B. C., with a friend and would remain there for several days. She thought nothing of it then, but when Bassett failed to return on the 10th, and failed to sail on the ship that was to take him across the Pacific, Mrs. Winters and the commander became thoroughly alarmed. They communicated their fears to the police.

ARREST A CRIMINAL AND HIS MOTHER.

But they admitted they had nothing much upon which to base any foul play theory.

"It just doesn't seem like my brother to act this way," said Mrs. Winters. "He was a man of exemplary habits. I can't believe that he would have left the city, stayed away so long, and finally missed his ship, without advising us about his change of plans."

The next day, September 11, Eugene Levy, a Seattle businessman, revealed to the police that he had been menaced by a man who had answered an advertisement similar to Bassett's. His description fitted closely with that of the stranger who had been last seen. Accordingly, a nationwide search both for Bassett and the stranger got under way.

Two days later Decato Earl Mayer, a habitual criminal, and his mother, Mary Ellen Smith, 62, were arrested in Oakland, Cal., in possession of an automobile identified as Bassett's. Moreover, the missing man's wrist watch, wallet and other personal belongings were found in the car.

Mayer at once produced a supposed bill-of-sale for the car, which was signed by Bassett. Both he and his mother insisted that the coupe had been purchased in a legitimate deal. But what about the wrist watch, etc? Their explanation was that these articles were in the car and they had not noticed them at the time of the arrest. As they did not know where to find Bassett, and they believed he had sailed for the Philippines, they had made no effort to find him and return his possessions.

Mother and son were placed in jail in Oakland. They continued to insist that they had purchased the car legally, and that they knew nothing of Bassett's whereabouts. However, they fought hard to prevent their extradition to Seattle.

Their efforts failed, and they were returned on September 22.

Now began a long, intensive and fruitless search for Bassett's body—for the police were convinced that he was no longer among the living.

Every possible clue was run down. County Sheriff Claude L. Bannick and a score of deputies searched everywhere within a 20-mile radius of Seattle, assisted by Boy Scouts, state patrolmen and city detectives.

Scores of likely looking hiding places were uncovered, scores of excavations dug, lakes and rivers were dragged. Tips about mysterious packages having been buried were investigated. Officers searched and dug in and about a small frame house Mayer had rented recently in Richmond Highlands, north of Seattle. But not a trace of Bassett could be found.

The suspects were arraigned on September 25 and stoutly maintained their innocence. When they were questioned about a pair of heavy gloves, a gun holster, and other sinister-seeming articles found in their possession, they insisted that these articles were innocuous in purpose and had been in their possession for years.

Constant grilling got the authorities nowhere. When they proposed to force a confession from Mrs. Smith by the use of "truth serum," her attorney, the late John F. Dore, at that time the best known and most famous criminal lawyer in that region, protested to the courts and was upheld.

Weeks passed. All efforts to find Bassett's body failed. Finally, on December 5, three months to the day after the government employee had disappeared, King County Prosecutor Ewing J. Colvin brought the prisoners to trial on charges of grand larceny.

No murder trial was possible, Colvin admitted, because no evidence had been uncovered pointing directly to the commission of a homicide. The proceedings lasted ten days and ended in convictions. Appeal motions consumed a few more weeks, then on January 30, 1929, Mayer was convicted as a habitual prisoner and given a life term. His mother received five to ten years. Both entered the state penitentiary on February 7.

Thus ended the first phase of the Bassett mystery.

That spring, on May 12, Mayer was returned to King County jail, pending an appeal to the state supreme court, his attorney, Henry Clay Agnew, arguing that there were errors and prejudice in his trial and sentence. Mayer, surly, uncommunicative and seemingly devoid of human emotion, remained closely guarded in Seattle through the summer and fall.

Then, on November 21, the case was suddenly reopened by the prisoner's lawyer after Mayer charged he had been made the victim of "third degree" methods through the use of the lie detector. Prosecutor Colvin was named as the villain who had done this.

Colvin in return asserted that, by means of the lie detector, scientifically known as a pneumo-cardiograph, he had obtained a confession of murder from Mayer in the course of a one-day series of tests. The prosecutor's own story, as given to the reporters, was as follows:

"On the recommendation of August Vollmer, consultant of President Hoover's crime commission, professor of criminology of the University of Chicago and former chief of police of Berkeley, Cal., I obtained the services of Leonard Keeler, assistant state criminologist for Illinois.

"Mr. Vollmer recently spent two days at the Bassett home in Annapolis. He has long been interested in this case.

"He recommended to me the use of his 'lie detector,' the machine which he invented. He recommended Mr. Keeler as the best technician on the machine.

"I obtained a leave for Mr. Keeler and arranged for his services. He arrived in Seattle Armistice Day. I took three days outlining to him every angle of the Bassett case and Mayer's supposed connection with it. We began using the lie detector on Mayer on Thursday, November 14.

"Mayer treated the lie detector as a lark at first. Up to a certain point in our seven days of investigation, he answered every question, but only with 'Yes, sir,' or 'No, sir.'

"The lie detector consists of two leather plates which go under the arms on either side of the breast and a chain which holds them in place from the back. There is a rubber tube wound around the arm to register blood pressure.

"A wire goes to a lamp socket and a mirror of ruled tape to make a graph of the reaction of respiration and blood pressure.

"The entire examination, for six or eight hours each day, has centered around the question: 'Where is Bassett's body?'

"We questioned him over and over, perhaps a hundred times. 'Is it in a lake?' 'Is it in the sound?' 'Is it in a well?' On all these questions, if he answered, the answer was 'No' and in any case a negative reaction was registered.

the "lie detector" came. Colvin said, when he pointed to a spot on a map where Mayer once paid an installment on a "little white house," and to the sites of two cemeteries.

"We found he would not answer any question relating to cemeteries," said the prosecutor. "When we worked along that line he struggled, threw his arms about, feigned fainting spells and convulsions.

"We had a plat made showing every grave in a Swedish cemetery, but Mayer positively refused to look at it.

"The most force that was used on him was last Sunday. When Mr. Keeler had just finished a series of questions on the graves and cemeteries about Bothell, Mayer, suddenly roused from lethargy, sprang like a cat and smashed the machine.

Two deputies grabbed him and he was shackled and sent back to his cell. Since that day his examinations have been made while he lay on a cot wearing an Oregon boot. Keeler repaired the lie detector and we began the questioning again Sunday evening.

"We gave him one day's rest in the last week. Every other day we reviewed all the maps briefly but thoroughly, and ended always where the best reaction showed, in the vicinity of Bothell.

"On Monday Mayer suddenly looked up at me and said, 'Colvin, I'll talk to you if you'll get these other fellows out.'

"The deputies handcuffed the prisoner, gave me a small pistol and left the room.

"Colvin, Mayer said, 'will you give me a trial? I'd have a chance to beat circumstantial evidence.'

"I assured him I would."

"I know what that machine is, Colvin," he said then. "I know it's recording the truth. I can't beat it. You know I killed Bassett. What will you do for me if I come clean?"

"If you'll lead me to that body, I told him, 'then I will not charge your mother with murder.'

"I'll tell you," he said, 'my mother has never done anything criminal except what I caused her to do.'

"Lead me to that grave and I will not charge your mother with murder, I said.

"All right, I'll go out there with you," he said.

NEW BOOKS - - - AND THEIR AUTHORS

Thought-Provoking.
SEGMENTS OF SOUTHERN THOUGHT. By Edd Winfield Parks. University of Georgia Press, Athens. 392 pp. $3.

The initial publication of the University of Georgia is an attractive and thought-provoking miscellany. At first glance there is nothing which ties together these varied essays on life and letters of the South. Also, at first glance it is not apparent whether the author is a sophomore or a wise old prophet—it was long ago discovered that both of these speak in the same tongue. This reader wishes to apologize for having judged hastily, and for having been equally wrong on both counts.

These essays do indeed present a unified whole—the south of the "Fugitives" of Nashville, the south from its reliable agrarian moorings by an industrial development not of its own choosing, and as a result God knows whether at great speed. Moreover, the results are capably arrived at, and clearly stated. The author's ironclad indictment of modern education, his equally sweeping condemnation of the modern state as being too realistic for its own good, his article on "Southern Poetic Theory" (a concept which in this reader's humble opinion has no real existence)—all of these leave considerable room for argument, but at any rate one side of the argument has been presented eloquently without fear of offending traditional prejudices.

It is somewhat surprising to find in a work of this character a long and scholarly discussion of George Borrow, the author pre-eminent of gypsy lore. However, even in this choice there may be a significance which on the surface is lacking. Borrow writes of an age when (to use the words of Sir Hugh Walpole in his admirable introduction to "Laven-gro") "men had time for endless discussions about the eternal and the price of crops, and whether life was worth living or not, and whether or no Battling Tom will on Tuesday night knock the Timman into a helpless jelly with his bare hands." The significance being (as the author may or may not have meant to indicate) that Borrow's 18-century England is the region which gave the Old South its birth and endowed it with traditions; that the south is not a matter of state lines and politics and Old Man River, but is a concept of time and such prosaic things as the presence or absence of chain drug stores. In other words "The world do move, and we move with it." A matter of regret, perhaps, but nonetheless we move. OLE H. LEXAU.

Thrill Story.
FOUR FRIGHTENED WOMEN. By George Harmon Cox. Alfred A. Knopf, New York. 303 pp. $2.

Meet Kent Murdock, news-photographer and detective-superior. You'll enjoy his company.

Kent went out on an assignment—just to get a few shots of the beautiful Irene Alexander, of the movies, and her week-end host, Ted Bernard, radio comedian, and skip right back to the studio. Instead, he ran right into the midst of four frightened women—understandingly frightened after Irene was found brutally and mysteriously slain. And Kent right in the midst of it, with fingers of suspicion pointing to him.

Every element of the true mystery story is here, woven into a story the reader will not want to put down until the last word is read.

Mystery Story.
THE BIG SLEEP. By Raymond Chandler. Alfred A. Knopf, New York. 277 pp. $2.

After a career which has carried him through a wide diversity of occupations, Raymond Chandler, with this, his first novel obviously has found his forte—mystery fiction—for in "The Big Sleep" he has set a new style of treatment and achieved a new high in detective standards with a story both amazingly clever and original.

Blackmail was the seed of it, and when his tentacles were followed they were found clutching greedily at a little group with a fortune made from oil. But blackmail was merely the seed. From it grew murderous vices which eventually snared out life after life, and left in its wake dark mystery which threatened only ultimate destruction of others.

But as in virtually all true mystery stories, justice prevails, and killers are brought to book. You'll enjoy it.

Common Sense.
WRITE YOUR OWN TEN COMMANDMENTS. By Bernard Eugene Meland. Willett, Clark & Co., Chicago. 147 pp. $1.50.

Here is a book packed full of common sense. The author is well versed with the problems of our complex social order and he challenges his readers to a new understanding of the realities of life. Dr. Meland states: "The purpose of writing one's own commandments is to sharpen the pattern of one's own personality and to project with some precision the lines of growth or change whereby one may attain greater personal effectiveness and maturity." Part II of the book sets forth the goal which seems to the author to define the course of intelligent living for the modern man. The chapter dealing with a "Healthy Sex Love" is unusually good. This book is written for those who are possessed with the desire to live creatively.

Spain—What Next?

With the smashing success of Generalissimo Franco's rebel troops at Barcelona, many experts now predict an early end to the Spanish civil war. What then will happen? The world speculates on the question and anxiously awaits the answer. If Franco conquers the rest of Spain will Mussolini withdraw his forces or will they maintain a military establishment in Spain directed at France? Will Germany demand and get trade concessions and military bases? Will the Italian war machine remain in Spain to be used as a club to force new and drastic colonial demands against France?

Can Britain maintain her "lifeline to India" through the Mediterranean if German and Italian influence pervades Spain? So Spain continues to make the headlines in the world's newspapers, with every evidence it will be there for some time to come. This map will give readers a better picture of that unhappy war-torn land.

Afield With a Naturalist

By GEORGE A. DORSEY.

WINTER SMALL FRY

TO THE GOLDEN-CROWNED KINGLET.

Little feathered elf so trim,
Sitting on the alder limb,
Braving all our wintry skies,
Farther south's a paradise.
Yet you choose to linger here—
Tiny avian pioneer:
Fitting through the woodlands bare,
Minding not the frosty air,
Active, while most life is still,
Lapping out your little thrill,
Plucky little sound of cheer,
Brightening all the landscape drear.
Tell me, bird, do you, like I,
Love this gray-hued winter sky,
Love to face this icy breeze,
Gloating in the leafless trees?
I salute you, comrade dear,
Winter holds for us no fear!
Yet my fireside, warm and bright,
Guards me from the cruel night;
You must brave the open sky—
You're a stouter heart than I.
Farewell, friend so brave and wee,
Hearty joy you've given me!

The kinglets are among our most interesting winter birds, and I must not let the season go by without saying something about them. They are such little fellows, hardly larger than the hummingbird, yet we have numbers of them with us all winter, and they seem to stand cold weather with no little success.

There are two species, the ruby-crowned and the golden-crowned. The ruby-crowns are usually found in sheltered thickets near streams in the woods. Almost any thick growth of alders, or where honeysuckle vines have taken to the trees, will be tenanted by one or two of these birds. The golden-crowns may often be seen here also, though they spend most of their time in the pines, traveling in little flocks, sometimes in company with other small birds.

The ruby-crowned kinglet may be heard singing from time to time during the winter, and especially in the spring before it leaves to go north to breed. Its song is a carefree little warble, elfin and childish in quality. Its scold notes are somewhat wren-like. Sometimes you may see the bird raise the little tuft of red feathers in its crown, though usually these are kept hidden beneath the outer feathers on top of its head.

I have never heard the golden-crowned kinglet sing while it is with us. Its call note is a little broken trill, rather high and somewhat cricket-like, though much more gentle in quality. If you were thinking of something else you might not notice the sound, even if the bird were close by.

Both birds are nervous and quick in their manner of movement. They are little balls of energy, flitting about, sometimes coming quite close to you if you stand still. Most of their time is taken up in searching for food. They are often quite acrobatic, twisting about and hanging upside-down to get at insects and insect eggs hidden in the bark of the limbs of trees, and in the needles of the pines. They must do our trees a great amount of good this way. I have seen the ruby-crown eat a few wild berries also.

ANNOUNCEMENTS AND NEWS.

There are signs of spring already. Here I have just finished a poem about winter, and then I find that the alders have put out their catkins, or "tags," as we used to call them. These have been out for over a week, and are real spring flowers. Then a few days ago I found a couple of hepatica blossoms in Cobb county. What a thrill they gave me!

One of our best observers telephoned me the other day that he had found three small snakes out. The little frogs are trilling, and birds are speeding up their songs. I found one violet in bloom in the woods back in January. Many things in nature cannot wait for the formal calendar opening of the season. New developments will happen before we are ready for them. Be on the lookout!

Next month comes National Wildlife Restoration Week, March 19 to 25. Our conservationists intend to make Georgia's participation one of the best in the nation. The Atlanta Bird Club comes forward with the proposition that we make the city of Atlanta a sanctuary for the birds. I think this is a very fine idea, and will have more to say about it later on. I'd like to hear what some of our readers think about it.

RECORDED RHYTHMS

By DUNCAN MacDOUGALD JR.

Oom Paul Whiteman's Swinging Strings are silk-smooth in the opening chorus of "Japanese Sandman," and Al Ryerson's single-string guitar obligato is sincerely rhythmic, but those would-be Nipponese effects and uncalculated changes in tempo are but mauvais gout. Ryerson scores again in "Raggin' the Scale," but what kind of individual likes such selections? The jitterbugs will swarm around "What Is This Thing Called Swing," as interpreted by the macabre Louis Armstrong. It's acrobatic and spectacular, and I dislike absolutely such manifestly bravura carryings-on. In "Jeepers Creepers" Louis' vocal is labored—disappointingly so; his bugling, however, is not. Mary Martin changes that old ornithological classic, "Listen to the Mocking Bird" into a demilitaristic aria, and lends zip and zest in solid French to "Les Filles de Cadix." Here Woodie Herman's brass platoon blossoms forth at last in all the sonorous glory—it's scintillatingly solid, gates, and that's no joke! Why don't the Hermites stay in this magnificent groove, anyhow? For the Cake Walkers Russ Morgan has baked "Goodbye, My Lady Love" and "Eli Green's Cake Walk," the fiddle's blend nicely, but to me sech fin-de-siecle stuff is unimportant.

Much better than all this is a Basie oldie "Swinging the Blues," wherein Joe Jones demonstrates he's the globe's premier parchment-pounder, and "Sent for You Yesterday"—relentless, almost sinister jazz, highlighted by moaning alto interludes, and Lester Young's chilling tenor. Fine also is Rheinhardt's wistful guitar in "Night and Day," by the French Quintet, and his single-string cadence in "Black and White." Ah oui, monsieur, c'est formidable, ca!

The stentoraphonic histrionics of Fats Waller in "Hold Tight" almost warrant a Wotan audition for the spaciuous tragicomedian; this preposterous jive is, however, partially redeemed by Al Casey's colossal swing guitar. The Big Un is much more pleasant in "You Out-Smarted Yourself," and indeed plays elegantly and gracefully.

For sheer guts and dynamic attack, no one equals Charlie Barnett, who's now developing a band that'll probably be the sensation (along with Shaw and James) of 1939. His "Prayin' Humble" is coruscating, savage jazz, and just listen to Charles fulminate first on alto, then on his most torrid tenor! "I Get Along Without You" is chiefly vocal, and there's promise in Barnett's steely brass. Eddie South—foremost of ebony violin virtuosos, displays noteworthy technique in "Mama Mockingbird" (again the minus polyglottos)—note those long, graceful melodic lines, but his "No More Blues" struck me as being almost archaic.

Space forbids reviewing the second "New Orleans" record, Ladinier's "Ja-Da" and "Weary Blues," so get the January Victor Record Review for Hugues Panassie's complete discussion of the remarkable wax.

I slighted Dorsey's "Ole Black Joe" last week, but this record really swings! Mince on clarinet equals Goodman here, there's expert cymbal work, and man, just auscultate that gutbucket bugle-whew! "This Is It," likewise by Tom, is a smooth commercial, while Babe Rusin's tenor and more polished percussionists are featured in "It's All Yours."

"Boy Meets Horn" is another Ellington concerto featuring Rex Stewart. Oftimes he's quite graceful, but here again technical virtuosity triumphs over art. "Old King Doo!" has an interesting duet between Hodges and (I think) Williams, but this record hardly increases Duke's renown. No comments are necessary about Dorothy Lamour's "Kinda Lonesome" and "Junior," since she sings 'em all in the same way. Devotees of the Boogie Woogie (a sort of low-down primitive blues, played rapidly, and characterized by monotonous, almost mechanical bass chords and tremulo, staccato right hand) will rejoice over three new vocalists by recognized Boogie Woogie artists, Ammons, Meade Lux Lewis and Pete Johnson, who really play this honky tonk music on down—way on down!

"Annabelle" and "And Then I Wrote" is offered by what they call "The Champagne Music of Lawrence Welk." I found it flat, non-vintage stuff, and it left me with a musical hangover. "Gotta Pebble in My Shoe" and "Simple and Sweet" is offered by Ray Herbeck and what they call his "Music With Romance." Kirby Brooks sings well, but I suspect only corn lovers will go for this one.

Stage, Screen and Dance Parade Top Stars Here This Week

Martha Graham Danced Down Church Aisle

Atlantans to whom "Classical Ballet" suggests toe dancers in white ballet costume, whirling and sweeping in traditional European form, will get a pleasant surprise Saturday night at the Erlanger theater.

Billed as a "Classical Ballet," Martha Graham will bring her remarkable troupe of dancers here, but instead of prescribed ballet routines, executed in typical European or Oriental tempo, Miss Graham's group will unveil a strikingly different type of dance interpretation. America, not Europe, will be reproduced in mood and tempo by the dance.

Miss Graham is, perhaps, better qualified than any other native American dancer to do this.

A tenth-generation American by birth, she has been interested in the dance since childhood, when she danced down the church aisle on Sunday to the tune of the organ and to the horror of her family.

This early eccentricity set her family against dancing, however, and it was not until she was 16 that she was able to wheedle parental permission to formally study classical dancing.

Her first appearance before the public was in 1919, while she was still studying at the Denishawn school in Los Angeles. She left this group in 1923 to teach at the Eastman School of Music in Rochester, N. Y.

It was at this time that she began to break with the classical European and Oriental styles, and began working on a series of ballet interpretations that were completely American. That she was successful is now a well-known fact in classical dance circles.

The curtain will rise at 8:45 o'clock Saturday night. Miss Graham is appearing under auspices of dance concerts.

Dancing, Drama, Action Offered In Pleasing Manner on Screens

By LEE ROGERS,
Motion Picture Editor.

You'll be seeing this week:

"Honolulu," at Loew's Grand. Eleanor Powell does the hula. Entertaining musical comedy.

"Three Musketeers," at Paramount. Don Ameche and Ritz Brothers frolicking in a musical version of Dumas' novel—which is not objectionable.

"Tail Spin," at Fox. Beautiful girls in airplanes. Action and drama.

"Girls on Probation," at Capitol. Jane Bryan in first starring role.

"Roxettes" at Roxy surpassing previous dances doing Tiller dance routines.

"Young Dr. Kildare," brought back to Rialto. Lew Ayres completes comeback in good family story which features Lionel Barrymore at his best.

Lovely Girls Fly Sleek Planes In 'Tail Spin' at Fox.

After much publicity—such as having beautiful stars fly preview film prints to strategic points, "Tail Spin" has opened a regular run at the Fox theater and offers enough action, speed and adventure to satisfy the thrill-loving patrons.

It's a roaring saga of pulchritudinous women fliers and the beautiful speed planes in which they risk their necks for love and money. The story found its origin in the annual Los Angeles-to-Cleveland woman's air derby and the "Powder Puff" event of the national air races.

In the leading roles are Alice Faye, Constance Bennett and Nancy Kelly. One flies for the love of flying, one because it brings her closer to the aviator she loves and one flies for the money. Supporting roles are handled by Joan Davis, Charles Farrell and Jane Wyman.

The picture is long but generally speaking furnishes the entertainment expected.

Ritz Brothers Romp in Roles Of 'Three Musketeers.'

The latest screen version of "The Three Musketeers," current at the Paramount, probably has Alexander Dumas turning over in his grave like a horizontal whirling dervish but it's still—thanks to the Ritz Brothers—good entertainment.

It's doubtful if anyone outside of Hollywood could have conceived the idea of casting these three zanies in the roles of the immortal Athos, Porthos and Aramis, but for a musical comedy version of the famous classic, nothing could have been more desirable.

Don Ameche makes as dashing a d'Artagnan as the most rapid fan could wish and the other members of the cast are uniformly competent as far as their comparatively unimportant parts will permit, but the show belongs to the Ritz Brothers from start to finish.

Much of the fast action and the flashing swordplay of the original Douglas Fairbanks film has been retained and d'Artagnan and his three valiant assistants again save the day in the nick of time. For amusement purposes it matters not that their help is accidental rather than intentional.—C. W.

'Honolulu' Presents Good Acting, Dancing at Loew's Grand.

The vital Eleanor Powell, the personable Robert Young, and the zany George Burns and Gracie Allen combined to put over with a bang at Loew's Grand theater their latest co-starring film, "Honolulu."

While the plot of a movie double exchanging real life roles with a movie star is not exactly new, it is handled well in this musical, and the film is swiftly paced, full of good laugh lines and, of course, the featured dancing of Miss Powell.

Young acts both his roles well.

Capitol Features Terese Rudolph, 'Long Ranger' on Stage.

A good screen and stage program opens today at the Capitol theater during which Jane Bryan, popular new screen actress, who recently has been co-starred with Bette Davis, will be seen in "Girls on Probation" with Ronald Regan, Sheila Bromley and many others.

The picture has to do with America's dangerous daughters who are paroled, their experiences and tribulations—and romances.

On the stage there are a variety of acts offered.

Another headline performer is Miss Terese Rudolph, stated to be one of the finest tap and toe dancers in America. Miss Rudolph gained world-wide publicity a year or so ago when she was reported missing following the bombing of the Cathay hotel in Shanghai where she was playing an engagement. She later underwent a similar experience when the S. S. President Hoover, on which she was returning to the states, was bombed.

Buck Owens, western performer and said to be the original Lone Ranger, will present his wonder horse, Goldie. In addition to being an expertly trained horse, Goldie has also appeared in several pictures with Shirley Temple, Jane Withers and was last seen as Lady Q with Mickey Rooney in "Stablemates."

Other acts on the program are: The Three Kings, balancing stars; the Karl Larkin Trio, hoop rollers and jugglers; and Herb Schriener, harmonica wizard and former member of Boro Minevitch's Rasicals.

"Girls on Probation" finds Jane Bryan and Ronald Regan starring on the screen of the Capitol this week.

Lunts Gain Fame As Co-Star Team In 'Guardsman'

Two of the brightest stars on the American theatrical horizon will shine in Atlanta for the first time this week.

Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne, actress, have been so successful on the stage's most active actor and Broadway that they have never been able to get away on a tour of the "road." "Idiot's Delight" will be presented Thursday night, and "Amphitryon 38" will be offered Friday for matinee and night performances.

The movie version of the first recently concluded a lengthy showing here. Its plot of an American dance troupe, "Harry Van and Les Blondes," and a phoney "Fountain of Youth" in an European hotel just before the outbreak of the next war, has been given wide publicity.

"AMPHITRYON" NOT NEW.

"Amphitryon 38" may be a little less familiar, but this is probably because Atlantans may not recognize it under Jean Giraudoux's new title.

The plot of Amphitryon is the oldest comedy situation in existence. Under various titles it has convulsed every generation since Plautus first put it in Rome back in 184 B. C. It concerns the designs of an amorous god, Jupiter, upon the mortal Alcemema, beautiful wife of the first Greek restaurateur, Amphitryon, whose spare time is spent away at the wars. Author Giraudoux says that his is the 38th version.

Legend of the Lunts dates back to a foggy day in the theater district of London. A little girl had just amazed the great actress, Ellen Terry, in a recitation of Portia's dramatic speech of denunciation in "The Merchant of Venice." Miss Terry was so impressed that she took the little girl as her pupil. That little girl was Lynn Fontanne. Shortly after this she made her theatrical debut—as a fairy dancing on the end of a wire!

Later she crossed the Atlantic to appear on Broadway. It was during a rehearsal there of a play called "A Young Man's Fancy" that she met Alfred Lunt, who had quit college to take a $5 a week job in "The Gingerbread Man."

Shortly after, in 1922, they were married. In 1924 they acted as co-stars together in "The Guardsman," and were definitely established together theatrically. "The Guardsman" was also their first play together under the auspices of the Theatre Guild. Since that time the Guild has kept them busy in one play after another on Broadway.

They have been seen together in such successes as "Arms and the Men," "The Brothers Karamazov," "Reveries," "The Sea Gull" and of course, "Idiot's Delight" and "Amphitryon 38."

BELLS HIT FASHION NOTE.

There's music in the air when Genevieve Tobin walks across the set of "Yes, My Darling Daughter" in a green wool tailored suit accented with a lapel pin of golden bell ropes tipped with tiny bells.

BLOUSE AND APRON FOR SPORT TOGGERY

HOLLYWOOD—Priscilla Lane knows her ABCs—for apron, blouse, Chenille—when it comes to sport togger.

Her new apron pajamas have the usual long full trousers and blouse but the unusual addition is a front tie-on apron which gives the semblance of a long coat. Blouse and apron are in pink dots on a pink background. She dons a beaded suede bolero over her sweaters or desert and beach dresses.

Priscilla writes C on her fashion slate when she wears a chenille bathing suit with matching beach cape. Tufts of soft chenille dot her suit to outline a flying fish design.

All-Laugh Program Is Billed At Roxy Theater This Week.

The grace of the Roxyettes is given stern competition this week at the Roxy by the fun of the vaudeville. As the picture, "Swing, Sister, Swing," also aims at laughter, with the energetic Ken Murray as chief mirthmaker, the program is indeed an all-laughter one. The Gae Foster Girls prance in a sprightly fashion through a "Tiller Dance" and win applause. Their other two dances are as colorful and expert as one has learn-

Rialto Playing 'Dr. Kildare' This Week

"Young Dr. Kildare," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production now playing a return engagement at the Rialto and co-starring Lew Ayres with Lionel Barrymore, is one of the most entertaining combinations of romance and suspense. Lew Ayres continues, in the title role, that remarkable "come back" as a star which has already included "Holiday" and "Rich Man, Poor Girl." Barrymore is, of course, delightful as the older doctor, while Lynn Carver, of Kentucky, proves a capable actress as well as an alluring girl in her first feminine lead. The cast includes Nat Pendleton, Jo Ann Sayers, Samuel S. Hinds and Emma Dunn. The story tells the early career of a young doctor. Although his father is anxious to take him into his extensive small town and rural practice, the younger man conceives he will find better opportunity to serve in a big city and accepts an internship in the city hospital. This, despite the fact that the girl he loves and who loves him, is waiting for him in the smaller town.

The complications that follow an inadvertent experience with a ward politician appear to have ruined the boy's career almost as soon as it is begun, until the wise old diagnostician comes to the rescue and shows him that happiness and love are not inconsistent with a physician's highest dreams of service to mankind.

Wally Ward and his pretty partner present an amusing act and imitate instruments right prettily. Raymond Wilbert is a talkative wizard who makes hoops do things that stagger the senses; the Coltons are a prepossessing young couple who look like a fashionable ball team and act like the Dead-End Kids, while Dave Monahan plays his xylophone.

Monday night local addicts to "Jitter-bugging" will again be given a chance to jitter on the stage of the Roxy to the tune of cash prizes for winners.

STEWART, LOMBARD STAR AT RHODES

'Made for Each Other' Held Over One Week.

Many actresses have changed "types" during the course of their careers, but the most sensational about-face the screen has recently witnessed is in the case of Carol Lombard. Unlike her former comedy roles, "Made for Each Other," now playing at the Rhodes theater, presents her in a dramatic role of a young modern woman who marries for love and dedicates her life to helping her husband, James Stewart, over the rough spots of their married life.

The story introduces Jane and Johnny Mason, a young couple deeply in love. Marriage follows a whirlwind courtship, and although the sweethearts are dedicated to the proposition that they are "made for each other," the patterns of every-day life catch up with them.

When a baby is born to the happy pair, all troubles seem to fade in the sweep of their joy and ecstasy. But this, too, is short-lived. Johnny, a promising young attorney, fails to get a junior partnership in the firm. Instead, he is asked to take a cut. Divorce is imminent.

FOR PLAIN FOLK. "Figuratively speaking" Ann Sheridan is much in the limelight in a slim and clinging black crepe dinner gown of extreme severity. The square neckline has two diamond clips, the only decorative accent.

Action From G. B. Shaw's First Movie

George Bernard Shaw, the playwright, has finally consented to Hollywood's persistent demands for permission to make his plays into movies. The first is "Pygmalion," in which Leslie Howard attempts to make a lady out of a Cockney flower girl (Wendy Hiller). While seek data on Cockney dialects, he makes a bet with Colonel Pickering (Scott Sunderland) that he can train the girl into a lady by teaching her to speak properly. The bet is made. Three months are allowed.

Eliza turns up for her lessons. Professor Higgins tells her she will have to work very hard and obey him implicitly, if she wishes him to bring about her transformation.

A bath is the first step of the transformation. Eliza, unaccustomed to bathing, resists vehemently, but Professor Higgins' housekeeper forcefully gives her a good bath.

Three months later Eliza makes a public appearance in the home of Professor Higgins' mother. Her enunciation is flawless, but her choice of topics for discussion is shocking. One of the young men guests, however, is captivated by her charms. Another appearance follows—this time at a reception. It is a complete success and the bet is won. But Eliza and Professor Higgins are left with the problem of Eliza's love of her teacher—a complication which no one ever thought would arise. New York critics have called this film "a honey of a picture." It opens Thursday evening at Loew's Grand.

ATLANTA ARTIST WINS RECOGNITION

Mary E. Hutchinson's 'Night' in N.Y. Exhibit.

The work of an Atlanta artist has just been hung in the American Artists' Congress, at 444 Madison avenue, New York.

The exhibit is a study in oils by Miss Mary E. Hutchinson, daughter of Mrs. Merrill Hutchinson, of 86 Eleventh street, N. E., of the head of a negro and is entitled "Night." The picture is of the school of "art in a skyscraper" instead of an ivory tower and was featured in the rotogravure section of the New York Times of February 5.

Miss Hutchinson has been studying art for 10 years and has exhibited in Chicago and in Atlanta. Her mother also is an artist, having numerous water colors to her credit.

WORK READY TO BEGIN ON 'NAZI SPY' PICTURE

HOLLYWOOD, Cal.—Anatole Litvak will return to Hollywood from New York this week to begin directing "Confessions of a Nazi Spy" at Warner Brothers.

Litvak made the trip to Broadway to find additional players for the cast of the topical film. Edward G. Robinson and Paul Lukas have been chosen already and will head a roster of 68 actors.

Robinson will portray Leoh G. Turrou, former G-man whose work in New York brought about the recent espionage trial there. Lukas is to play the role of the chief Nazi spy in America.

After 6:50 p. m., differences arise seemingly without cause, and it may not be easy to find harmony with others.

FEBRUARY 24--FRIDAY: Consistent effort is apt to be rewarded today. Associates may be helpful, so seek advice or assistance. You should find generosity, kindness and understanding in your work, which is favorable to almost any line of endeavor.

FEBRUARY 25--SATURDAY: If you are an early riser this morning—that is, if you get up before 3:10 a. m.—guard against excessive mental activity or nervous tension. You may be too hasty and erratic. Between 3:10 a. m. and 4:06 p. m. should be a gay and cheerful time, when people generally will agree, and so concessions are generously made. After 4:06 p. m., can be a happier period than the day, but over-optimism should be watched.

HOW TO USE THESE INDICATIONS TO BEST ADVANTAGE. Should you receive an important telephone call, giving you the first news you have of a certain thing, look and see if the influences at that particular time are friendly or unfriendly. The outcome of that call will be colored by the influence prevailing then.

HOWARD THURSTON

The Missionary Who Got on the Wrong Train—and Became a Famous Magician.

By DALE CARNEGIE.

One cold night, half a century ago, a crowd was pouring out of McVicker's theater, in Chicago. It was a laughing, happy crowd—a crowd that had been entertained by Alexander Herrmann, the great magician of that day.

A shivering newsboy stood on the sidewalk, trying to sell newspapers to the crowd. But he was having a tough time of it. He had no overcoat, he had no home, and he had no money to pay for a bed. That night, after the crowd faded away, he wrapped himself in newspapers and slept on top of an iron grating which was warmed slightly by the furnace in an alley back of the theater.

As he lay there, hungry and shivering, he vowed that he too would be a magician. He longed to have crowds applauding him, wear a fur-lined coat, and have girls waiting for him at the stage door. So he made a solemn vow that when he was a famous magician, he would come back and play as a headliner in the same theater.

That boy was Howard Thurston—and 20 years later he did precisely that. After his performance he went out in the alley and found his initials where he had carved them on the back of the theater a quarter of a century before when he had been a hungry, homeless newsboy.

At the time of his death—April 13, 1936—Howard Thurston was the acknowledged dean of magicians, the king of legions. During his last 40 years he had traveled all over the world, time and again, creating illusions, mystifying audiences, and making people gasp with astonishment. More than 60,000,000 people paid admissions to his shows, and his profits were almost $2,000,000.

Shortly before his death, I spent an evening with Thurston in the theater, watching his act from the wings. Later we went up to his dressing room and he talked for hours about his exciting adventures. The plain, unvarnished truth about this magician's life was almost as astonishing as the illusions he created on the stage.

When he was a little boy his father whipped him cruelly because he had driven a team of horses too fast. Blind with rage, he dashed out of the house, slammed the door, ran screaming down the street and disappeared. His mother and father never saw him or heard from him again for five years. They feared he was dead.

And he admitted that it was a wonder he wasn't killed; for he became a hobo, riding in box cars, begging, stealing, sleeping in barns and haystacks and deserted buildings. He was arrested dozens of times, chased, cursed, kicked, thrown of trains, and shot at.

He became a jockey and a gambler; at 17 years of age, he found himself stranded in New York without a dollar, and without a friend. Then a significant thing happened. Drifting into a religious meeting, he heard an evangelist preach the text, "There Is a Man in You."

Deeply moved, and stirred as he had never been stirred before in his life, he was convinced of his sins. So he walked up to the altar and with tears rolling down his cheeks, was converted. Two weeks later, this erstwhile hobo was out preaching on a street corner in Chinatown.

He was happier than he had ever been before, so he decided to become an evangelist, enrolled in the Moody Bible school at Northfield, Mass., and worked as a janitor to pay for his board and room.

He was 18 years old then, and up to that time, he had never gone to school more than six months in his life.

HOWARD THURSTON. He slept on a grating in back of the theater and dreamed of baffling the world.

ing out of box car doors at signs along the railway and asking other tramps what they meant. He couldn't write or figure or spell. So he went to his classes in the Bible school and studied Greek and biology in the daytime, and studied reading and writing and arithmetic at night.

He finally decided to become a medical missionary and was on his way to attend the University of Pennsylvania when a little thing happened that changed the entire course of his life.

On his way from Massachusetts to Philadelphia, he had to change trains at Albany. While waiting for his train, he drifted into a theater and watched Alexander Herrmann perform tricks of magic that kept the audience pop-eyed with wonder. Thurston had always been interested in magic. He had always tried to do card tricks. He longed to talk to his idol, his hero, Herrmann, the great magician. He went to the hotel and got a room next to Herrmann's; he listened at the keyhole and walked up and down the corridor, trying to summon up enough courage to knock, but he couldn't.

The next morning he followed the famous magician to the railway station, and stood admiring him with silent awe. The magician was going to Syracuse. Thurston was going to New York—at least he thought he was. He intended to ask for a ticket to New York; but by mistake he too asked for a ticket to Syracuse.

That mistake altered his destiny. That mistake made a magician instead of a medical missionary.

At the floodtide of his fame, Thurston got almost a $1,000 a day for his show. But I often heard him say that the happiest days of his life were when he was getting a dollar a day for doing card tricks for a medical show. His name was painted in blazing red letters across a streaming banner, and he was billed as "Thurston, the Magician of the North." But that is north, if you are from Texas.

Thurston admitted that there were many people who knew as much about magic as he did. What, then, was the secret of his success?

His success was due to at least two things. First he had the ability to put his personality across the footlights. He was a master showman, he knew human nature; and said those qualities were just as important for a magician as a knowledge of magic. Everything he did, even the intonations of his voice and the lifting of an eyebrow, had been carefully rehearsed in advance, and his actions had been timed to split seconds.

And second, he loved his audience. Before the curtain went up, he stood in the wings, jumping up and down to shake himself awake and to wake up his audience. "I love my audience. I love to entertain them. I've got a grand job. I'm so happy. I'm so happy!"

He knew that if he wasn't happy, no one else would be.

Once more the authorities bore down on Mayer, with the result that he made a confession that he had murdered Bassett. (Which he later repudiated, asserting he had done so to save his mother from persecution.)

The search for the body was resumed. The area described by Mrs. Smith was combed inch by inch. But again nothing was discovered. Mrs. Smith's attorney declared she was insane. A group of psychiatrists therefore examined her and reported on October 3 that she was sane and in full possession of her faculties. Accordingly trial of the defendants was set for November 28.

On the stand Mrs. Smith appeared quite composed as she repeated her confession. She explained how it had been obtained, following correspondence she thought she was having with a friend outside the prison, and in which she went into details about the crime. Actually she had been deceived about this correspondence.

Another prisoner, Mrs. Margaret Piddelford Fawcett, one-time adventures serving a term for fraud, had worked on Mrs. Smith's sympathies and, in co-operation with Warden McCauley and a woman matron, had duped her into believing that her letters were being smuggled out of prison and the answers smuggled in. Later an officer, in the guise of a clergyman, visited her and she had made the confession in the belief that it would be kept secret.

Unable to produce Bassett's body or any direct material evidence of homicide, the prosecution had to drop its case on the confession and the possession of the missing man's personal belongings. County Prosecutor B. Gray Warner asserted that if he could prove beyond a reasonable doubt that a murder had been committed, then the actual corpus delicti was not necessary in this case.

The state rested on December 10 and Judge Batchelor took under advisement a defense motion for a directed verdict of not guilty. On Sunday, the 11th, Mayer was served with breakfast about 9 a. m. Nothing unusual was observed about him at that time and no particular watch was maintained. At about 3 p. m. the jailer again appeared with a tray of food.

But Earl Mayer had no need of food any more. He was dead on the floor of the cell—dead by his own hand. It developed that he had made two attempts at suicide, the first being unsuccessful when his belt snapped after he had hooked it to a bunk in an upper tier and then tried to hang himself.

The second attempt was an extraordinary jump indeed. He had stuffed his nostrils with toilet paper to shut off his breathing, then wadded two heavy paper towels down his throat, tying a strip torn from his shirt around his mouth to keep the gag from coming out.

Next he had taken his belt and lashed it tightly around his throat, and his final preparation was to make a set of handcuffs from a knotted handkerchief, crossing his hands and inserting them in the loops and reversing his hands so that the loops were pulled tight.

Then, standing in a corner of his cell, unconscious, he had come and he had fallen forward, cutting his head against his cot.

He had been dead about an hour. Mrs. Smith became hysterical when she was informed. She insisted on viewing the body. She kissed the cold lips, screaming, "Earl, my darling, why did you do it? Why did you do it?"

He had left her a penciled note: "Dearest Mother: "Words are sometimes meaningless. I am tired and wish to."

"Depart from a place wherein is oppression; and leave the house to tell its builder's fate. And, for the place I leave, I shall find another land." "Everything is all right with me and it will be easier for you in the future. Lovingly, "EARL."

"P. S.—You will receive help. Prefer cremation without cost." Two days later Mrs. Smith, now 73, pleaded guilty and was sentenced to life imprisonment. Before she left for Walla Walla she was given a farewell "banquet" by women prisoners at the jail.

Mrs. Marion Bassett, mother of the victim, who came on from Annapolis, Md., to attend the trial, expressed her sympathy for the woman, believing that all her actions were governed by her idolatrous love for Mayer.

Of Mayer himself Mrs. Bassett could not speak, but through her daughter it was learned that she could feel no pity for him and believed the world was a cleaner place with such a man out of it.

ASPARAGUS

By W. ELBRIDGE FREEBORN.

One of our readers has suggested that we devote today's column to the culture of asparagus. We are very glad to comply with this request, and will be glad to comply with other similar ones.

Asparagus. Officially Variety All-time: Lily family. Native along the coast of Europe and Asia. It is a hardy perennial, much grown for the soft edible spring shoots.

The culture of this, the finest of early vegetables, has been simplified. The old method of excavating to the depth of three feet or more, throwing in four to six inches of broken stone or bricks for drainage, then filling to within 16 to 18 inches of the surface with well-rotted manure, with six inches of soil on which to set the roots, has given place to the simple practice of plowing or digging a trench 14 to 16 inches deep, spreading well-rotted manure in the bottom to the depth of three or four inches. When well-trodden down, cover the manure with three or four inches of good garden soil, then set the plants, with the roots well spread out, covering carefully with soil to the level of the garden, then firming the soil with the feet. This will leave the crowns of the plants four to five inches below the surface. In setting, two-year-old plants prove more satisfactory than older ones.

Two or three years after setting, the crop may be cut, but not sooner, if a lasting bed is desired, as the effort to replace the stalks has a tendency to weaken the plant unless the roots are well established.

The yearly treatment of an asparagus bed consists of cleaning of tops and weeds in autumn, and adding a dressing of well-rotted manure to the depth of three or four inches, this manure to be lightly forked into the bed the following spring; or, the tops may be allowed to stand for winter protection and the mulch left off. A top dressing of nitrate of soda, at the rate of 200 pounds to the acre, is often beneficial as a spring stimulant, especially in the case of an old bed. Good results also follow an application of bone meal or superphosphate at the rate of 300 to 500 pounds to the acre. The practice of sowing salt on an asparagus bed is very common. Still, beds that have never received salt are found to be as productive as those having received an annual dressing. Nevertheless, a salt dressing is recommended. In stubborn, heavy soil the best method in making a permanent bed is to throw out all the earth from the trench and replace with good fibrous loam. Two rows of asparagus, 25 feet long and three feet wide, supply a large family with an abundance throughout the season, and if well taken care of will last many years. The shoots are often blanched by heaping earth around them, but green asparagus is better in quality. The size of the shoots is a question of rich soil, good tillage, and somewhat of the variety. Asparagus is not propagated by divisions.

The first tool an earnest home gardener has need of in the spring is a spade, and the first question after the ground is dry enough to work, is to spade the garden.

This task may seem appalling to one unaccustomed to it, and the temptation to hire a man with a plow is always strong. And many a garden fever has grown cold waiting for the plowman to keep his promise, while many a garden has been a failure because the work entrusted to the plowman or a laborer was poorly done.

Spading the garden after a winter of inactivity means sore muscles and a weary back, but nothing more. And what a satisfaction to start on time and be independent.

Good tools are always important for this job. One needs a spading fork strongly made, a sharp, short-handled spade and a steel rake. It is best to work in an avenue about six feet wide.

Begin by digging across this avenue a trench about two feet wide and one full spade's depth. Remove all the earth from this trench. Clean the surface of the next two feet of all debris, and tram this debris down in the bottom of the trench. Then spade up and throw into the trench the earth from the next two-foot strip across the avenue. This in turn, provides a second trench, which may be filled as was the first. This operation is repeated until the garden is finished.

Burying debris, including the remains of an asparagus bed, is said by department of agriculture experts to be as good as burning is for destroying the fungi of plant diseases. But the method here described must be followed with exactness, and the debris burned deeply, so it will not be as good as burning is for destroying the fungi of plant diseases. But the method here described must be followed with exactness, and the debris burned deeply, so it will not be as good as burning is for destroying the fungi of plant diseases. But the method here described must be followed with exactness, and the debris burned deeply, so it will not be as good as burning is for destroying the fungi of plant diseases.

Spading in this manner prepares the garden thoroughly for seeding at a much smaller expense than paying a plowman, and much greater satisfaction. All the corners may be

WHAT TO DO IN FEBRUARY.

MULCHING: February is a good month for all kinds of mulching. The rose bed, perennial garden and shrubby border should be protected. The best material for this mulching is a mixture of sheep manure, peat moss and woods earth; one bale of peat moss, 100 pounds of sheep manure and one wheelbarrow of woods earth.

FERTILIZER: It is also time to fertilize the lawn with a light application of some good fertilizer, such as bone meal or sheep manure. These two fertilizers are much to be preferred over the highly concentrated ones at this season of the year. Use raw bone meal for bulbs and perennials.

PRUNING: Take the tall stems out of hybrid perpetual roses as well as the dead wood. Wait until next month to do the final pruning of rose bushes. Remove the dead wood from all shrubbery and evergreens and give the fruit trees a good pruning.

SPRAYING: Now that fruit trees are dormant be sure and give them a good thorough spraying with scalecide and for peach trees use dry lime sulphur.

reached, which is difficult with the plow, and the damage so often done by careless plowmen is avoided. But remember, you must never spade wet soil. Wait until a mud-pie crumbles as you pat it, instead of holding together. That is the time-honored test.

Questions, Answers On Garden Subjects

By MRS. FLETCHER PEARSON CROWN

Question: My amaryllis was planted in a small pot last fall, a year ago. It bloomed the following spring, then was allowed to become dormant. This past winter I put in fresh top soil, did not entirely replant, and now two leaves are coming up, but no bloom stalk thus far. What shall I do?

Answer: I have seen amaryllis put up several leaves before the bloom stalk, so it might be that this is what is happening to yours. It might be that the plant did not have sufficient food last spring to form a bloom for this spring, and the fresh soil which you added during the winter, came too late to make a bloom for this spring. I have not found amaryllis easy to succeed with, though I know many gardeners who apparently forget them for months at a time and have not only one bloom, but a succession of blooms, sometimes three times a year. I think that a small amount of bone meal will do your plant good.

Last week we were talking work for this month—cutting back your very tall nandinas should be done at this time. Make cuttings of these pieces about eight or nine inches long, and plant in a rooting frame. They are very easy to root, and you never can have too many nandinas. Always keep a few nandinas in seed and plant them. Mine usually take a year to germinate, but then the small seedlings grow very rapidly. I also propagate my mahonia in the same manner.

Begin dividing your hardy perennials before the new growth starts, for if you wait longer you will break the tender sprouts. Do not attempt to divide without lifting the entire plant. Wash the soil from the roots so that you may easily see their formation, and you will not mutilate them so badly. Replant three divisions for the large one removed, but not until you have fertilized and reworked the soil. Do not let leaves continue to lie piled up around the plants. Mine do better without so much covering.

WHAT TO PLANT IN FEBRUARY.

VEGETABLES: All of the hardy vegetables may be planted this month, as soon as the ground is dry enough to work. This will include the following:

ROOTS AND TUBERS: Asparagus roots, horseradish roots, rhubarb roots, artichokes and Irish potatoes.

SEEDS: Turnips, purple top globe, Swiss chard, beets, cabbages, Brussels sprouts, carrots, English peas, kale, rape, spinach,

A NEW MENACE

LINDA FOUGHT DESPERATELY TO PREVENT MARSADA FROM FIRING INTO THE CAGE. TARZAN WATCHED IN DISMAY. AT ANY MOMENT THE WEAPON MIGHT BE DISCHARGED INTO THE GIRL'S BODY.

ELECTRIFIED BY ALARM, TARZAN PLUNGED AT THE DOOR WITH PRODIGIOUS POWER. THE FASTENINGS CRACKED.

THE APE-MAN LEAPED OUT UPON MARSADA. WRESTING THE GUN FROM HIM, HE FLUNG IT AWAY.

THEN HE LIFTED THE MAN HIGH IN THE AIR AND DASHED HIM TO THE GROUND. MARSADA SCREAMED.

BUTANO HEARD HIS MASTER'S CRY. SCOOPING UP HIS RIFLE, HE RAN TO MARSADA'S AID.

TARZAN SAW HIM COMING. HE TURNED TO ESCAPE IN THE FOREST.

MARSADA, STAGGERING TO HIS FEET, SAW THAT HE HAD MISSED HIS CHERISHED CHANCE TO KILL TARZAN.

NOW ALL HIS VIOLENT WRATH CENTERED ON LINDA. "I'LL GET YOU FOR THIS!" HE SHOUTED.

THE GIRL RAN TO TARZAN, HER ARMS OUTSTRETCHED IN A SILENT PLEA THAT SPOKE PLAINLY: "TAKE ME WITH YOU!"

HOGARTH-

AT THAT MOMENT BUTANO BURST UPON THE SCENE, HIS RIFLE READY FOR ACTION.

"SHOOT!" MARSADA CRIED HYSTERICALLY. "KILL THEM BOTH!"

NEXT WEEK: FLYING TALONS

A new Tarzan adventure strip will start soon. Watch for it in the daily Constitution.
